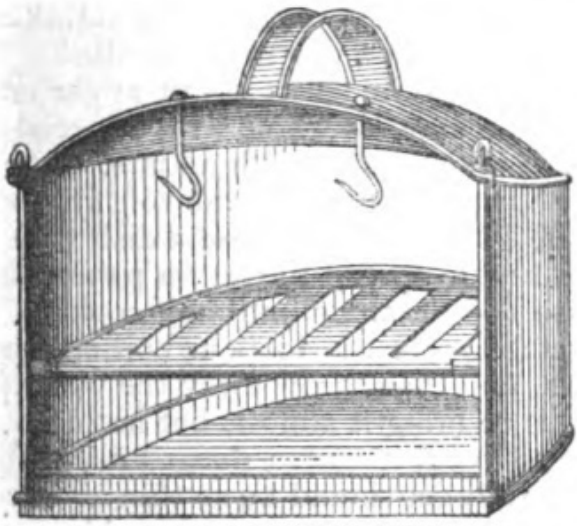
coloured, the oven is of a moderate heat, and suitable for browning puddings, etc. Another test is to put a piece of kitchen or writing paper into the oven; if it curls up in about a minute, the oven is hot enough for baking.

Where there is no oven, puddings may be browned before the fire. Meat, puddings, and even pastry, may be cooked in a Dutch oven before the fire.



Dutch Oven.

Scones, oat-cakes, etc., may be cooked on a girdle (much used in Scotland) instead of in an oven.

Girdle.
