PREFACE.

THE Editors of the London and Provincial Medical Directory having announced their resolution to suppress all mention or allusion to the publications and appointments of the section of the Medical Profession who have publicly embraced Homœopathy—it was thought right, in self defence, that a sectional Directory should be compiled to supply the omission thus made. At the request of several friends, the Editor of this volume undertook the task, and, ignorant of the labour required, rashly promised that it should appear at the beginning of the year.

On the first of January, when the work ought to have been in the hands of the profession, comparatively little information had been received by the Editor, and he was obliged either to delay the publication, or to send out an imperfect and unsatisfactory work. Since that time many causes have concurred to increase the delay—the constant engagements of practice during a very sickly season left little time to carry on the extensive correspondence required, or even to arrange the materials which were at length liberally supplied. Six months after the promised time, he ventures to submit the results of his enquiries to the profession, in the hope that they may prove useful, though incomplete, and very far from shewing, as he hoped they would, the exact progress of Homœopathy up to the present time.

The contents of the book speak for themselves, and need no prefatory remarks, further than to indicate the principles which have been followed in the compilation.

As it was impossible to compare the Medical Titles claimed by each Practitioner with the records of the Universities and Examining Boards—the Editor has copied exactly the returns received—so that each individual, and not the Editor, is responsible for the correctness of the Professional Title and Medical and Literary Distinctions he assumes.

It was found impracticable to obtain, for this publication, anything approaching to a complete list of the American and Continental Practitioners; and the Editor has been obliged to limit himself to naming one or two Medical Men in the principal towns.

The list of Works published in English, on Homœopathy, has occupied much attention. The Editor hopes he has omitted none of value; his aim has been to include all; and he will feel indebted for information respecting any omission.

Lastly, he begs gratefully to offer his best thanks for the kind assistance and co-operation he has received from all parties to whom he has applied for information; to Drs. Quin, Chapman, Dudgeon, Russell, Metcalf, of New York, and a friend, a secret disciple, his acknowledgements are especially due.

All communications respecting this, or future editions of the work, are requested to be addressed, either to the Editor, or to Mr. Turner, 41, Piccadilly, Manchester.

56, Prospect Street, Hull,
21st June, 1853.

The Hahnemann Hospital,

FOR THE TREATMENT OF PATIENTS ON THE HOMŒOPATHIC PRINCIPLE, 39, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE.

President, LORD ROBERT GROSVENOR, M.P.

Treasurer, W. LEAF, ESQ.

The objects of the Hospital are—

1. To relieve the Poor who suffer from Acute Diseases, by receiving them as In-patients.
2. To give relief to Out-door Patients.
3. To afford facilities to the Medical student or Inquirer, for obtaining a knowledge of the Homœopathic doctrine and practice, at the bed-side of the Patient, by Clinical Lectures, and by Lectures, in the Hahnemann School attached to the Hospital, on the Homœopathic Therapeutics and Materia Medica.

Patients Treated at the Hospital from Commencement, October 16, 1850, to August, 31, 1852.

IN-PATIENTS.—Adults	.....	448
,,	Children	104
			552
OUT-PATIENTS.—Adults	.....	5962
			8472
TOTAL	.....		9024

Patients Received at the Hospital from Half-past Seven to Nine o'Clock in the Morning, without letters of recommendation.

The Board of Management beg earnestly to urge the importance of providing the means for the continuance and support of this Institution, which daily proves, by its extending list of Patients, the present benefits arising from this Charity, and leads the Board of Management to anticipate the best possible results in the advancement of Homœopathy.

One of the most important steps towards attaining this is the enlistment of the sympathies of the Rich and Poor, and by obtaining from each and all some contribution to the support of an Institution which promises, from its now established School of Medicine, gradually to assist in training Homœopathic Practitioners, who are so largely required in all parts ofthe country. In this view, as well as being a benevolent Institution, the maintenance of the Hospital is most important, and the Board of Management therefore trust their appeal will not be in vain.

W. WARNE, HON. SEC.

HOMŒOPATHIC TIMES.

HOMŒOPATHY has at length obtained a firm standing as a medical science. The promulgation of the doctrine between the professional and non-professional supporters of the system can only be regularly communicated in a publication which shall impartially record the progress effected in the various branches of practice, and the circumstances which are every day transpiring to establish its success. The HOMŒOPATHIC TIMES now in its fourth year of good service, supplies in all essential respects, this medium, and furnishes, in a popular style, the general information identified with the development of the cause. Contributed to, and recognised by, the leading members both of the medical and non-medical body, its columns are devoted to the consideration of those topics most calculated to promote and disseminate the grand truths propounded through the Hahnemannian philosophy.

The chief requirements to render this Journal further effective, are a copious supply of Hospital and Dispensary reports, and Medical observations and cases, whether of public or private practice. A very large circulation only is needed, which should be aided by every sincere friend to our CAUSE, Eclipses, &c. in 1853.

This year there will be TWO ECLIPSES of the SUN, and ONE of the MOON.

I. June 6, an annular Eclipse of the SUN, which will only be visible over portion of South America, the United States, and a large surface of the Pacific Ocean, on both sides of the Equator. The Eclipse will be central and annular on the principal Georgian Island, called Tahiti.

II. June 20, a partial Eclipse of the MOON, not visible in this country. The Eclipse begins in the morning, at 5h. 13m., Greenwich time; Eclipse ends at 6h. 50m.

III. November 30, a total Eclipse of the SUN, invisible in this country. The visibility of this Eclipse will extend over nearly the same portions of our globe as the former solar Eclipse, on the 6th of June.

MERCURY will be visible in the mornings, a little before sunrise, about January 10, May 8, September 3, and December 23; and in the evenings, soon after sunset, about March 23, July 20, and November 14.

VENUS will be at her greatest brightness about the end of the year.

SATURN'S RING will be an interesting object for telescopic observation during the months of January, October, November, and December.

POST OFFICE.

INLAND LETTERS (the Channel Islands included) are to be stamped, if not exceeding half an ounce, to the value of 1d.: one ounce, 2d,; two ounces, 4d.; and 2d. for every additional ounce or fraction of an ounce. Parliamentary petitions may be received by members of either house, free, if sent without covers, or in covers open at the sides, when not exceeding 32 oz. in weight. By a new regulation, prepayment of all Inland Letters must be by stamps.

Letters insufficiently stamped are charged double the deficiency on delivery. If sent unpaid, double the prepaid rate. This additional charge does not apply to parliamentary proceedings.

Pamphlets open at the ends pay in England 1d. per 2 oz.; 6d. from 2 to 3 oz.; 8d. from 3 to 4 oz.; and 2d. per oz. more up to 16 oz.; beyond which they cannot be sent. This postage applies to the English side only; in France, the postage is as heretofore.

A single book or pamphlet, in a cover, open at the ends, or without a cover, not exceeding 1 lb. in weight, 6d., not exceeding 2 lbs., 1s.; and for every additional lb. or fraction of a lb. 6d.: the postage to be prepaid by affixing stamps. Besides the address of the party to whom sent, the address of the sender may be added; and any other writing may be added in the book itself, but not on the cover. No packet must, on any account, exceed 2 feet in length.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING A WILL.

Specified to be used since December, 1837.

The Will must be signed at the foot or end of it by the Testator, or by some other person in his presence, and by his direction.

The signature must be made or acknowledged by the Testator in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time.

The witnesses must attest and subscribe the Will in the presence of the Testator.

It will then be sufficient for the passing of real or personal property, or both.

Note. The whole of the above ceremonies will be required whether the Will contain the most trifling gift, or disposes of property of the first magnitude.

And note further. A gift to an attesting witness or to the wife or husband of an attesting witness is void; therefore neither a legatee nor the wife nor husband of a legatee should be made an attesting witness to the Will.

No particular form of attestation is necessary, but the following may be used If used, it must be copied and written at the end of the Will below the signature of the Testator.

"Signed by the said the Testator, in the presence of us present at the same time, who in his presence have subscribed our names as Witnesses."

The Testator should appoint one or more Executors.

If, after the execution of the Will, any alteration be made in it, by obliteration, interlineation, or otherwise, care must be taken that such alteration be executed in like manner as the Will itself. And it will be desirable also that the names of the Testator and witnesses be written on the margin of the Will, opposite every such obliteration, interlineation, or other alteration.

Wills may at any time be revoked; but Wills made by single persons or widowers are absolutely void on their marriages after the date of the Wills, but such Wills may be re-executed by new delivery with two attesting witnesses, or by a Codicil similarly executed, expressive of the Testator's wish to carry into effect the provisions of the original Will.

N.B. No person who is under 21 can make a Will.

ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROTECTION OF HOMŒOPATHIC STUDENTS AND PRACTITIONERS.

At a Congress of Homœopathic Practitioners, held in London, on the 23rd and 24th of July, 1851, which was attended by upwards of sixty medical men engaged in the practice of the Homœopathic system of medicine, the recent proceedings of the Universities of Edinburgh and St. Andrews, and the College of Physicians of Edinburgh, were brought under consideration, and an association was formed for the purpose of protecting the interests of the public and of Homœopathic practitioners and students, endangered by the proceedings of these established bodies.

In order to carry out the views of the Association, a numerous and influential committee was formed. This committee met on the 26th July, and passed the following resolutions:—

1st.—That immediate steps be taken to enlist among the members of the Association as great a number as possible of the friends of Homœopathy, lay and professional, and of those who acknowledge the justice of the cause which the Association has espoused.

2nd.—That a circular should be issued, without loss of time, inviting the co-operation and union of as large a number as possible in this undertaking.

3rd.—That the committee should be increased by as many influential names as can be obtained.

4th.—That tracts and pamphlets should be issued, in order to inform the public respecting the measures resorted to by the established corporations, for the purpose of depriving practitioners of the right to practice medicine according to the best of their judgment.

5th.—That other measures, to be hereafter resolved on, should be taken for the defence of Homœopathic students and practitioners, and of the public, against the acts of oppression perpetrated and contemplated by the Colleges and other licensing bodies.

6th.—That local secretaries and committees be established in every town where there is a Homœopathic practitioner, for the purpose of aiding the Association in its efforts.

7th.—That Dr. Dudgeon be appointed secretary, with power to nominate a paid assistant secretary, for the purpose of carrying out the resolutions of the committee.

8th.—That the secretary be empowered to call a meeting of the committee as often as circumstances shall occur to render it necessary.

In order to carry out the views of the association a committee was formed, consisting of the following gentlemen:—

Report of the Acting Committee of the Association for the Protection of Homœopathic Students and Practitioners.

It is now 18 months ago since Mr. Alfred Pope was refused his degree of Doctor of Medicine by the medical faculty of the University of Edinburgh, because he declined to pledge himself never to practice the Homœopathic system of medicine. To vindicate the liberty of every practitioner of medicine to employ all the means for curing the sick which his reason might suggest and his experience sanction, this Association was formed; and three distinct objects were pointed out to your committee to strive to attain. The first was the redress of the immediate grievance, and the procuring a diploma for Mr. Pope; the second was to act on the medical faculty in the University, through the patrons, in order to prevent the recurrence of the injustice; and the third was to acquaint the public with the whole facts and arguments of the case, so that in the event of a continuance of this despotic course they might be prepared to claim the protection of the State in some way or other in favour of conscientious students against the infatuated attempts of any learned body to make them pledge themselves to remain for ever stationary in the practice of their profession. We are happy to say, that the efforts of the Association have been attended with triumphant success. Mr. Pope received a diploma from the Homœopathic Medical College of Philadelphia, on forwarding his testimonials to that body along with the statement of the facts drawn up by your committee. To the Town Council, who are the chief patrons of the Edinburgh University, a petition was presented, numerously signed by men of the highest weight in the kingdom, and the result was that the Lord Provost said "he believed that that which caused the complaint had been done somewhat inadvertently, and he was satisfied that every student, whatever his notions regarding homœopathy might be, would soon find no barrier to his obtaining a degree."

The public were addressed in a volume entitled, "Homœopathy in 1851," of which nearly a thousand copies were sold in the course of a few months; and among some fifty notices in various journals there was only one which took the part of the Professors as against the Students. But the most emphatic testimony given in our favour is that by Sir William Hamilton, Professor of Logic in the University itself, who, by the universal and undisputed consent of Europe, is the most distinguished name connected with that Institution. His judgment is given in the following words:—"Since the previous sheet was printed, above four months ago, I see that the Medical Examiners have been publicly accused of rejecting a candidate, not for incompetence, but on the confessed ground that he was supposed favourable to a medical theory, rising dangerously in opinion, and not in unison with the medical theory of his examiners. On such a step—such an injustice—such an absurdity—the old sectional examiners would not have ventured. If the charge be well founded, an Edinburgh Medical Graduate may now be an ignorant, unable to spell his mother-tongue, but must not be a proficient, professing to think for himself. So certain also are now the opinions of a majority, touching the very practice and in the very body where heretofore medical scepticism was always in proportion to medical wisdom! Our Gregorys and Thomsons—what would they now say to this?"—Discussions on Philosophy and Literature," by Sir William Hamilton, Bart., p. 643.

That after this, such a scene should again occur in Edinburgh, is, we believe, simply an impossibility; and were the operations of this Association confined to this one great school, there would be no need of its further continuance. Unfortunately, however, the light which has been forced upon the Examination-hall of Edinburgh has not yet travelled so far as Aberdeen.

That most northern of the Universities adheres to the evil example set by the metropolis, as the following document, which will be interesting to some future historian of medicine, proves :—

King's College, Aberdeen, 5th Aug., 1852.

"Which day the Senatus Academicus of the University of King's College, Aberdeen, being met and constituted, inter alia, the Mediciner handed in a report, signed by himself and the other examiners for medical degrees, wherein they stated, inter alia, that immediately after the last term they had examined another candidate, who had arrived too late, in consequence of a mistake regarding the advertisement, that they were then satisfied with the examination, and told the candidate that they would recommend him to the Senatus for graduation. Since that time, however, he had, after correspondence, stated to the Examiners, that 'he believes the homœopathic law is generally, if not universally, true;' and the Examiners have had what appears to them satisfactory proof that he practices accordingly; and they therefore now recommended to the Senatus that the degree should not be conferred on him. The Senatus, therefore, unanimously resolved not to confer the degree of M.D. on the gentleman in question, for the reasons given in the said report." &c. &c.

It does seem somewhat strange that this learned body, after the avowal of the candidate of his belief in homœopathy, should have sought proof of his practising according to that method. Suppose that proof had failed, and he avowed his belief in one system, but practised another, the inference is that then they would not have had the same difficulty. That Aberdeen will, at a proper interval, follow Edinburgh, in its contrition as it has in its error, we have no doubt; but, in the meantime, it would be premature to disband our forces, more especially as there is to be brought before Parliament this session a bill respecting the practice of medicine, which may seriously effect, as it seems to be aimed especially against, homœopathists, if it be allowed to pass in its present form. Your committee is in communication with some influential members of parliament on this matter, and is assured that if the body of adherents to homœopathy are only firm there is no real danger.

In these circumstances the committee thinks it is indispensable for the full accomplishment of all that the Association proposed, that it should not yet be dissolved, and to cover the expenses already incurred, which will be seen by the balance sheet to exceed the sums collected by upwards of £15, and to have some money in hand to meet future expenses, the committee begs to suggest that it is desirable that each member contribute a further sum of half-a-crown. As it is important to extend the influence of the Association, the Committee hopes that many who are not yet members may be induced to become so, which they can do by sending their names to the Honorary Secretary, accompanied by the enrolment fee of half-a-crown.

On behalf of the Committee,

R. E. DUDGEON, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE.

Doncaster, St. James's Hospital, Cleveland Street. The first stone was laid by Dr. Dunn, the founder, on the 26th May last, and it is expected the building will be ready for the reception of patients in January, 1853. It is a triangular-shaped building with the apex pointing towards the turnpike road to Sheffield, and the base abutting upon a reserved area of land which may be applied to the future extension of the edifice, if necessary. The principal front faces Cleveland-street, but the principal wards are lighted by large plate-glass windows looking out upon the turnpike road. The building is divided into two sections, one of which is for the accommodation of patients, the other for the officers and conveniences of the institution. The entrance is placed between these two leading compartments and is approached through a handsome porch of four arches, surmounted by a lofty turret provided with four circular apertures at the top for clock dials. The vestibule and staircase are immediately within the porch, the former being spacious and lofty, and the latter consisting of two flights of broad stone steps. In this, as in every other part of the edifice, the most excellent and efficient provision is made for warmth and ventilation. A box of coiled pipe, in connection with the heating apparatus, is situated at the bottom of the staircase, and diffuses a most agreeable warmth throughout this portion of the building. Fresh air is admitted by apertures all round the floors, and the vitiated atmosphere escapes through ventilators inserted in the ceiling. On the left-hand side of the entrance is situated the casualty ward—a lofty, spacious, well-lighted, and well-ventilated apartment, capable of holding eight beds, and provided with a recess near the window for facilitating surgical operations. This room occupies the whole area of the west-end of the building. On the right hand side of the entrance a short passage runs to the extremity of the building, on each side of which are arranged the surgeon's room, matron's room, porter's room, and kitchen; the latter is furnished with proper apparatus for supplying the bath room with hot, warm, and tepid water, besides the usual culinary requisites. On the opposite side, but having no internal communication with the building, is placed the wash-house; and there is also a store-room and pantry. The kitchen garden is situated at this end of the hospital, and we may here mention that the most ample cellar room is provided under the building. On ascending the staircase, we find at the top of the first flight, and under the window which lights it, a large blank panel, in which is to be inserted a painting by Mr. H. Tilbury, of the town, representing "The Good Samaritan," or some other appropriate Scripture incident. On the second floor, the principal apartment corresponding with, and situated immediately over the casualty ward, is adapted for a fever ward, or a supplementary casualty ward, as the exigencies of the case may require. It is also a spacious, lofty, well-lighted, and well-ventilated apartment, and capable of holding eight beds. These beds, we may state, will all consist of horse-hair mattresses, placed upon iron frames, each three feet wide and six feet six inches long, and it is intended that none but iron bedsteads shall be used throughout the institution. On the opposite side of the landing, a gallery runs to the end of the building corresponding with the passage below, and on each side are ranged the sleeping apartments of the surgeon, the matron, and the porter respectively. At the end of the gallery is situated a spacious room, which, on occasion, may be used as a female ward, there being sufficient accommodation for the matron and nurse in the apartment into which the ward immediately opens. We are informed that, if required, room could be made for as many as 21 beds in this institution, without intrenching upon the accommodation of the officers. On the north side of the gallery is the bath room, which will be provided with hot, warm, cold, and shower baths, which, we understand, will be available to the annual subscribers to the institution. On the south side of the landing a small room over the porch will be supplied with water, washing conveniences, &c., to obviate unnecessary journeys up and down stairs. Above this apartment is placed another of the same dimensions, which might be employed as a sleeping room, and above that is the clock turret, in which will be placed a clock with two illuminated dials, one facing St. Sepulchre Gate, Cleveland Street, &c., and the other, the Shakespeare's Head, and the new houses rising in the intervening space. The whole institution will be lighted with gas. The building will be warmed, as we have already intimated, by hot water circulating through pipes placed in every compartment of the building; underneath these pipes are placed the apertures for the admission of fresh air, which will thus be tempered as it ascends into the rooms, and will diffuse a uniform temperature throughout the edifice. In addition to the warming apparatus, fire-grates are placed in all of the rooms, to be in readiness, if necessary. The whole building is in fact replete with every convenience, and no one who inspects it can doubt its fitness for the purposes for which it is designed, or the great utility it is calculated to be, not merely to the railway people, but to the town at large. Dr. Dunn has already secured the services of W. H. Denham, Esq., M.R.C.S. and L.A..C., as House Surgeon; Sergeant Lane, late of the 10th Light Dragoons (11 years clerk to the regiment), as House Porter; Mrs. Mullins, of Wadworth, as Matron; and supernumerary nurses will be engaged as required. Dr. Dunn will be the Consulting Physician and Surgeon, and have the general management of the institution. There will be eight beds in the first instance, and others added as required. The total cost of the building and fittings will be about £1,500. It has been insured under the special clause of the act of parliament exempting charitable buildings from the duty on such policies. The architect is Mr. G. Houghton; the contractor Mr. Elsworth; the clock and dials have been supplied by Mr. Woodmansey; the gas fittings by Mr. W. S. Smith; the stores, &c., by Mr. Farr; and the heating apparatus by Mr. Slater. We are requested to state that in all cases where serious accidents are sustained, patients will be admitted without the necessity of obtaining any previous recommendation.

Irish Homœopathic Society. This Society, which is composed chiefly of non-professional persons, was organized on the 10th April, 1845, principally with the view to secure, for the poor and needy, the benefits of a genuine homœopathic treatment, and also by means of publications, addresses, &c., to aid in the general diffusion of Hahnemann's doctrines. During the past years of its existence the Society has been enabled to extend its benefits to many suffering individuals. And still further anticipates the establishment of an Hospital for the reception of acute cases of disease. The Society has published two editions of Dr. Luther's "Concise View," which has been reprinted in America, and translated into German and French. It has also published a pamphlet entitled "Homœopathy briefly explained by a practitioner."

The American and Continental Homœopathic Medical Directory.

The Editor finds it impossible to give, as he intended, a complete list of the American and Continental practitioners and Homœopathic institutions in this year's publication—the short period which has elapsed since this volume was projected rendered it impossible to obtain the necessary information. The following lists, though very imperfect, are inserted:—

List of Homœopathic Physicians in the State of New York and Principal Atlantic Cities.

(From the North American Homœopathic Journal.)

At an expenditure of considerable time and labour, we have procured the following list of the homœopathic practitioners in the State of New York. We are sorry to say that it is quite imperfect, many names being undoubtedly omitted in those counties from which we have received none, or at least very imperfect returns. It presents, however, quite a formidable appearance, when we reflect that, ten years ago, there were not a dozen physicians in the State, and that we now count over three hundred legally qualified practitioners.

This number, however, does not by any means truly represent the actual progress and state of the homœopathic art in the State of New York; for we learn from the reports that have been sent in to us that in nearly every county there are physicians who make a partial, sometimes secretly, a very extensive use of the homœopathic remedies, and who desire earnestly to be homœopaths, but who have not the moral courage to announce themselves as such, and breast the persecution of their fellow practitioners. We are further informed that in those counties which are poorly supplied with physicians of our school, there are numbers of lay practitioners, who, from a sincere conviction of the excellence of the new system, do their best to relieve the sufferings of the sick until a professional man can find his way among them. To the best of our information, and we have taken great pains to secure accuracy in this matter, every person whose name is included in the following list, is an avowed homœopathist, and either a graduate or a duly licensed physician.

American Homœopathic Colleges, Hospitals, and Dispensaries.

HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL COLLEGE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Located in Filbert Street, above Eleventh, Philadelphia.

This School was chartered by the Legislature of Pennsylvania about five years ago, and with the same rights and privileges guaranteed to it as to the Medical department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Faculty was formed in the fall of 1848, and the first course of instruction was given during the latter part of that year and the beginning of the next. The School has prospered beyond all precedent since its establishment. Its first class numbering sixteen Students, and its last ninety-three. The College edifice is large and commodious, and has an extensive Museum of apparatus, designed to assist the Student in his studies, and the several Professors in delineating their respective courses of instruction.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

WALTER WILLIAMSON, M.D., Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics.

WM. S. HELMUTH, M.D., Professor of Homœopathic Institutes, Pathology, and the Practice of Medicine.

JOSEPH G. LOOMIS, M.D., Professor of Obstetrics and the Diseases of Women and Children.

ALVAN E. SMALL, M.D., Professor of Physiology and Medical Jurisprudence.

MATTHEW SEMPLE, M.D., Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology.

FRANCIS SIMS, M.D., Professor of Surgery, its Principles and Practice.

WILLIAM A. GARDINER, M.D., Professor of Anatomy, General and Special.

REGULATIONS OF THE COLLEGE.

The affairs of the Institution are under the control of a Board of Managers, consisting of the President of the College and twelve gentlemen, elected annually by the Corporation.

The Faculty shall have authority to elect their own officers, consisting of a President and Dean, hold meetings for the purpose of arranging and conducting the business of their department, and for the preservation of order and decorum among the medical students.

The Winter Course of Medical Lectures will begin annually on the second Monday in October, and end about the first of March ensuing.

Graduates of respectable Medical Schools shall be permitted to attend the Lectures of the College free of expense, except the payment of the Matriculation Fee.

Digitized by UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN Original from UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

A candidate for graduation must be of good moral character, and be possessed of sufficient preliminary education; have attained the age of twenty-one years, have applied himself to the study of medicine for three years, attended two courses of medical lectures, the last of which must have been in this Institution; and have been, during that time, the private pupil, for two years, of a respectable practitioner of medicine.

Students who have attended one complete course of Lectures in another Medical School, may become candidates by attendance upon one full course in this Institution.

The candidate, when making application for an examination, must exhibit his tickets to the Dean, or give other satisfactory evidence to the Faculty to prove that the above regulations have been complied with.

Special examinations in particular cases may be had, with the consent of the Faculty.

The examination of the candidates for graduation will begin about the middle of February; and the commencement for conferring the Degree of the College shall be held by a special mandamus of the Board of Managers, as soon after the close of the Lectures as practicable.

The candidate, on or before the first of February, must deliver to the Dean of the Faculty a thesis, composed by himself, and in his own handwriting, on some medical subject, which shall be referred to one of the Professors for examination.

The Essay must be written on thesis paper, of a uniform size, the alternate pages being left blank.

A thesis may be published by the candidate, permission of the Medical Faculty being first obtained.

The candidate shall pay the fees of graduation at the time of presenting his thesis, and in the event of his rejection, the money shall be returned to him. The order of the examinations of the candidates shall be determined numerically by lot.

The examination shall be conducted in private by each Professor, and the voting in the case of every candidate shall be by ballot.

A student receiving two-thirds of the whole vote of the Faculty, shall be considered as having passed.

If, in the opinion of the Faculty, a candidate would be very much benefitted by attending another course of lectures, of which the Dean will inform him, he may withdraw his thesis without being considered as rejected.

If a candidate should not be successful in the first ballot, and one or more of the Professors have any remarks to make in relation to his qualifications, they shall be heard, and if the case demands it, a second vote may be taken. In unsatisfactory cases, the candidate may avail himself of a second examination before the whole Faculty, with their consent.

Formal notice of the successful examination shall be given by the Dean to the passed candidates, each of whom shall record his name and address upon the Register of Graduates, with the title of his thesis.

The names of the passed candidates are to be reported by the Dean to the President, who will communicate such report to the Board of Managers, in order, if approved by them, their mandamus be issued for conferring the degree.

Digitized by UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN Original from UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

A passed candidate shall not absent himself from the commencement without the permission of the Faculty.

	DOLLARS.
Amount of Fees for a full Course of Lectures	100 00
Matriculation Fee (paid once only)	5 00
Practical Anatomy	10 00
Graduation Fee	30 00
Fee for Students who have attended two full Courses in another medical school	30 00

The Matriculation ticket must first be obtained of the Dean, before any other tickets can be purchased.

The tickets must be taken by the first Monday in November, except in special cases, to constitute a full course.

Students who have attended two full courses of instruction in this Institution, or one full course in this school, and one or more in another respectable medical school, shall be admitted to the subsequent courses of the College without further charge.

The Medical Faculty shall have authority to consider and decide upon cases of special application for admission to the lectures.

Students will be admitted to the Homœopathic Hospital, to receive Clinical Instruction and witness treatment at the bedside of the Patients, and surgical practice and operations. For public information, address

WILLIAM A. GARDINER, M.D.,

American Homœopathic Societies and Institutions.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF HOMŒOPATHY,

Established April 10th, 1844.

This Association is composed of nearly 300 duly qualified Homœopathic medical practitioners, residing in various parts of the United States. The main object of the Society is to improve and consolidate the art of medicine, and to secure,—by means of successive and extensive experiment,—a sound and permanent Materia Medica. The Society has, year by year, reported much useful and interesting information on the therapeutic properties of certain American plants, the medicinal powers of which had hitherto been unknown, and which are published in the "Transactions of the Institute." An Annual Session of the Institute is held in some important town in the States, when an address is delivered to the members, and the interests of Homœopathy, both past and anticipated, are freely discussed. Each member is expected to make some written communication on the subject of Homœopathy at every general meeting, and also to make trials of drugs upon himself. The Society is governed by the following officers:—

President.—E. T. Foote, Esq., M.D., of New Haven.
General Secretary.—William A. Gardiner, Esq., M.D., Philadelphia.
Provisional Secretary.—S. S. Guy, Esq., M.D., Brooklyn.
Treasurer.—S. R. Kirby, Esq., M.D., New York.

The next annual meeting of the Institute will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, on the second Wednesday in June, 1853, at ten o'clock, a.m., when Dr. Bayard, of New York, will deliver the yearly address. The following is a list of the MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE FOR 1851.

HAHNEMANN ACADEMY OF MEDICINE.

The Physicians of New York and its vicinity established the above Academy in the year 1850, and secured its incorporation under the law of the State, as a scientific Association.

President.—John F. Gray, Esq., M.D.
Vice-President.—S. R. Kirby, Esq., M.D.
Corresponding Secretary.—P. P. Wells, Esq., M.D.
Recording Secretary.—J. W. Metcalf, Esq., M.D.
Trustees.—Hudson Kinesley, M.D.; J. A. McVickar, M.D.; A. S. Ball, M.D.

HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

The existence of this Society is found to be a great boon to the persecuted and calumniated followers of Hahnemann in New York State. Shut out from kindly intercourse with their Allopathic brethren, they seek closer fellowship with their own order, and unitedly labour for the attainment of that triumph Homœopathy is destined yet to achieve. Numerous meetings of the Society are annually held, and the central "Bureau of Materia Medica' is constantly receiving additions, while the whole body of members are investigating the properties of ten different drugs At the last annual meeting of the Society fifty new members were admitted. The next annual meeting will be held in the City Hall, Albany, on the 8th February, 1853.

President.—Dr. L. Clary, of Syracuse.
Secretary.—Dr. Henry D. Paine, of Albany.

HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL ACADEMY OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

It is proposed to organise a new Society for the propagation of Homœopathy in the State of New York. The first meeting will be held in January next. The members will be composed of Physicians practising in Yates, Ontario, Steuben, &c. The foundation will be under the Act of Congress of 1848. Dr. Hudson, Dundee, N. Y., Secretary.

NEW YORK SOCIETY FOR MEDICAL CONFERENCE

Was instituted with a view to create a spirit of unanimity and concord among the practitioners of New York, and by means of discussions and conversations, on the forms of disease, and the modes of treatment, to form a kind of Medical Improvement Society. So far it has succeeded admirably. The Winter Session was resumed on the 13th of October last.

MASSACHUSETTS HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY,

First formed in December, 1840, and composed of three members only, the membership, however, has continued to increase till the roll now numbers sixty names. In the early part of 1850 the Society resolved that each member be requested to report the number and results of cholera and dysenteric cases treated during the period of epidemic in the States. Up to June of that year only twenty members had reported. The aggregate is—

Cholera	115 cases	.....	14 deaths.
Cholerine ...	318 cases	.....	2 deaths.
Dysentery ...	1160 cases	.....	32 deaths.

PHILADELPHIA HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY.

Circumstances prevented the formation of a Homœopathic Medical Society in this large and flourishing State until the 19th July last, but now that a Society has been organised, with a powerful and energetic staff of officers, surrounded by a host of practitioners, a popular College, and a crowded Hospital, it is confidently anticipated that at no distant day Philadelphia shall reap for itself Homœopathic laurels, and largely extend the benefits of the cause.

WESTERN INSTITUTE OF HOMŒOPATHY.

The first Session of this Association was held in the city of Chicago, Ill., on Tuesday the 3rd of June, 1851. The members have been actively engaged since the formation of the Society in proving medicines, among which the following are mentioned :—Apis Mellifica, Arsenite of Lime, Esculus-glabra, and the Iodide of Sulphur.

WISCONSIN HOMŒOPATHIC INSTITUTE.

In common with other Societies, the Wisconsin Institute has its Annual Meeting, its President, Secretary, and Treasurer. It has been in existence for some years, and has been employed in proving the medicinal virtues of Euonymus-atropurpurea (Burning Bush) and Apis Mellifica (Honey Bee).

HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY OF WASHINGTON AND SARATOGA COUNTIES

Was organised on the 16th of October last, and "is open to all Physicians who acknowledge the great law of cure, viz , Similia Similibus Curentur."

President.—Dr. B. F. Cornell, of Moreau.

Secretary.—Dr. S. G. Perkins, of Waterford.

RHODE ISLAND HOMŒOPATHIC SOCIETY

Has been in existence for some years, and has been eminently beneficial in "civilizing" the State in which it is located.

President.—H. C. Preston, Esq., M.D.

Secretary.—Wm. Hoppin, Esq., M.D.

HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL SCHOOL OF RIO DE JANEIRO.

This School was founded in July, 1844, by the indefatigable Dr. Mure, of Rio, and by him, and his colleagues, opened for Homœopathic Medical Instruction in January, 1845. During the year 1845 numerous accusations were brought against the Institution and its Teachers. Some of the latter were imprisoned on false charges, and the former was condemned as a nursery for "assassins." At length in 1846 the Secretary of State for Justice acknowledged the right of the College to grant diplomas, and under Continental Homœopathic Hospitals.

GUMPENDORF HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, VIENNA.

Physicians.—Dr. Flieschmann. Dr. Wrumb.

Assistant Physician.—Dr. Caspar.

This Institution was formerly called the "Hospital of the Sisters of Charity," and is well known, both in Britain and on the Continent, as an object of interest, as well as of abuse. The Hospital was opened in 1832, for the reception of Cholera patients, from which period till January, 1835, a half Homœopathic, half Allopathic system of treatment was pursued. In 1835 Dr. Flieschmann was appointed Hospital Physician; and having resolved fairly to try the strength of Homœopathy, he got rid of all Allopathic drugs, and treated every case of disease that presented itself solely homœopathically. The success of Dr. Flieschmann's experiments are well known. The following table shews the total results of cases admitted into the Hospital from January, 1835, to January, 1848 :—

Remaining from 1847.	Admitted.	Cured.	Dismissed Uncured.	Died.	Remaining.

In addition to the above, and during the same period, upwards of 52,000 out-patients were treated at the Dispensary in connection with the Hospital.

The Hospital of the Sisters of Charity at Vienna has been largely frequented by medical men from all parts of Europe, who were anxious to see homœopathic practice; and certainly, homœopathy is much indebted for its present position in the world to the ability and zeal of the physicians, and to the care and kindness of the nurses of this hospital. Through the interest of Dr. Flieschmann, and on account of the success attending the Homœopathic treatment of disease in this hospital, the Emperor of Austria was induced to rescind the statute which forbade the practice of homœopathy in the Austrian dominions, and also to establish an institution in Vienna for the teaching of Homœopathy, under the protection of the Government, and with Dr. Wrumb at its head as Principal.

HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, LEOPOLD FAUBOURG, VIENNA.

This Hospital contains twenty-four beds, is attended by an efficient Staff of Physicians, and Sick nursed by the Sisters of Charity.

HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, LINZ, UPPER AUSTRIA.

Physician.—Dr. Reiss.

House Surgeon.—Dr. Pleninger.

As the Government of Austria requires a correct monthly return of the number of patients admitted to any hospital within its jurisdiction, together with the nature of the disease laboured under, and the results of treatment, the utmost reliance may be placed on the published medical statistics of that country; and, therefore, the charge "manufacturing," which is frequently brought against Homœopathic statistics is altogether groundless, so far as Austria is concerned. The Hospital at Linz was opened for the reception of diseased persons on the 1st of June, 1842. It contains thirty beds; the patients are nursed by the Sisters of Charity, to which order the building belongs; and in point of cleanliness and comfort, it is in no way inferior to the most favoured hospital in Britain. The total results of cases treated in this institution from 1st June, 1842, to 31st December, 1848, are shown in the following table:—

Admitted.	Cured.	Relieved.	Dismissed. Uncured.	Died.	Remaining.
4247	3719	181	111	200	38

KREMSIER HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL.

Physician.—Dr. Schweitzer.

This Hospital was opened on the 12th October, 1845, for the benefit of the sick poor of Kremsier. The Sisters of Charity act as nurses here also. The following are the results of treatment from the date of opening till 31st December, 1848:—

Remaining from 1847.	Admitted.	Cured.	Dismissed Uncured.	Died.	Remaining.
26	1515	1413	54	89	23

HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, NECHANITZ.

Physician.—Dr. Feltl.

This Hospital was founded in 1846 by the Countess Theresa Von Harrach. The mortality in this Hospital during the years 1846-7-8 was 2-48 per cent., and the cost of each patient in the Institution was, on an average, 6 florins, 15 krewners, (13s.). The total results during these years were as follows:—

Admitted.	Cured.	Relieved.	Died.	Remaining.

HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, GYONGYOS.

Physician.—Dr. Horner.

The following are the results of cases treated in this Hospital from 1st July, 1846, to 30th June, 1847 :—

Admitted.	Cured.	Relieved.	Uncured.	Died.	Remaining.

HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, TURIN.

This Hospital was founded by the efforts of the Canon of the Cathedral Abbé Cottolængo, where all the patients are treated Homœopathically under the immediate superintendence of Dr. Demichelis.

L'HOSPICE DE LA PROVIDENCE, NICE.

This is an Institution of great interest, being solely devoted to the restoration and protection of neglected and diseased Orphan Children. From 1815 to 1835, the Hospital was under Allopathic treatment, from 1835 it has been under Homœopathic; the mortality under the former system was very great; under the latter the health of the Children has been better maintained, and the number of deaths greatly reduced.

HOMŒOPATHY IN THE GENERAL HOSPITAL AT MADRID.

For a number of years Homœopathy has been practised in this Hospital with so much success that the Queen has, by royal mandate, sanctioned the establishment of the chairs for the teaching of Homœopathy: one for Clinical, the other for Theoretical Lectures. Drs. Rio and Nunez, Professors.

HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, MOSCOW.

Physician.—Dr. Schweikert.

This Hospital was opened for the Homœopathic treatment of disease, in presence of the Governor General, Prince Sctscherbatoff, and other persons of rank on the 16th of December, 1845. It is supported by voluntary contributions. No report of the success of the undertaking has yet reached us.

MISKOLTZ HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL.

Physician.—Dr. Stern.

The local authorities of Miskoltz, aware of the benefits of Homœopathy, granted Dr. Stern permission (in 1846) to open an Hospital, and voted a yearly donation to assist in supporting it, but the Royal Government shortly after overruled the resolution of the local power, and caused the Hospital to be closed, not however before certain good results were obtained —out of one hundred and twenty-one patients treated, ninety-six were cured, twenty-two much improved, and three were dismissed uncured, and no deaths.

HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL, ST. PETERSBURG.

Physician.—Dr. Stender.

The Minister of the Interior (in 1848) placed one half of a female Hospital under the care of Dr. Stender, Homœopathic Physician, in order that, side by side with Allopathy, the merits of Homœopathy might be made to appear. The experiment continues to demonstrate the utility of the last named system.

HOMŒOPATHIC CLINIQUE, LEIPZIC.

This Institution is in connection with and supported by the Central Society of Homœopathic Physicians. Without having Hospital accommodation, it affords medical advice and medicine to a large number of the destitute poor of Leipzic. The supporters of the Charity anticipate being able shortly to open an Hospital.

HOMŒOPATHIC WARD IN THE HOSPITAL ST. MARGUERITE, PARIS.

Dr. Tessier has, for a number of years, practised Homœopathy in his Ward in this Hospital. The Ward contains one hundred beds, and the applications for admittance to this department of the Hospital are very great, and constantly increasing. Dr. Tessier has recently published a comparative view of the results of Allopathic and Homœopathic practice in St. Marguérite's, from which publication we quote the following statistics :—

CALCUTTA NATIVE HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL.

Physician.—Dr. Tonnerre.

This Hospital was opened on the 17th March, 1852; it contains ten beds. The total number of in-door cases treated since the opening have been eighty five; seventy two of which have been dismissed cured, and seven remain under treatment. A Dispensary is connected with the Hospital, where advice and medicine have been afforded during the same period to 1291, of which 996 have been dismissed cured, and 214 cases have been lost sight of.

Continental Societies and Institutions.

On the Continent, as in Britain and America, there exists many associations for the defence and protection of Homœopathy, and for general professional improvement and intercourse. Among the most useful of Foreign Societies may be named the following—"The Gallican Homœopathic Society," which holds an annual Congress in some of the French cities; "The Central Society of German Homœopathists," which was founded by Hahnemann in 1829; "The Austrian Proving Society;" "The Hungarian Homœopathic Society;" "The Homœopathic Society of Vienna;" and 'The Hamœopathic Society of Western Germany."

Bibliographia Homœopathica Anglica.

The special vocation of the Missionaries of Truth is to proclaim it to their fellow men, to bring it practically to bear on the interests of humanity, and to defend it from the assaults of the ignorant and the prejudiced. In such occupations their energies and their days are worthily spent. Time passes on, the truth, which a short time before was only received by a few, is embraced by all. The historian seeks to trace its progress, but the steps by which it has advanced, and the individual efforts which have been made for its diffusion, are forgotten; he knows what once was ridiculed is now worshipped—but for want of contemporary records, he is obliged to chime in with the hackneyed language of his brother historians.—"The early history of all great movements is buried in obscurity."

I have made the following catalogue of the works published in Great Britain on Homœopathy, not as a history of the propagation in our country of the truth Hahnemann was privileged to enunciate, but to provide materials for the future historian of medicine. When the time comes, as come it will, that the Homœopathic science shall be universally acknowledged by the Medical Profession, it will be matter of interest to know who were the men whose hearts were first opened to receive the truth, and how they sought to propagate it. Nay, the enquiries will be made who opposed it, and what were the causes that prevented its immediate and universal recognition. To furnish a reply to the first, I have endeavoured to give a complete list of all the works published in defence of Homœopathy in Great Britain. At some future time I hope to place on record a similar list of all the writings of its opponents. By the kindness of Dr. Metcalf, of New York, who has liberally placed his papers and manuscripts at my disposal, I am enabled to add the North American Homœopathic works. So the following catalogue includes all the Homœopathic works published in the English language. I do not criticise; I merely record. The time for criticism has not yet arrived:—

1. The Homœopathic Medical Doctrine, or "Organon of the Healing Art;" A New System of Physic, translated from the German of S. Hahnemann. By Charles H. Devrient, Esq. With Notes, by Samuel Stratten, M.D. Dublin: W. F. Wakeman, 9, D'Olier Street; Simpkin, Marshall, and Groombridge, London; and Malcolm and Stewart, Edinburgh. 1833, 8vo., pages 332.

2. Title Page—A Practical Appeal to the Public through a series of Letters, in defence of the new system of Physic, by the illustrious Hahnemann; who commenced his honourable career in Germany thirty years ago as a Homœopathic Physician, and continues still, though now an octogenarian, to prosecute his profession of medical faith with progressive success, from a system founded upon reason, truth, and long experience; already confirmed by incontrovertible facts; authenticated by a cloud of respectable witnesses in different parts of Europe and America, which, if introduced and verified in the British dominions also, will speedily be hailed there as the most useful, and consequently the greatest discovery of any age, and a real blessing to future generations, when assailed by the cholera morbus, and other fatal diseases, whether acute or chronic.

A variety of candid remarks and desultory observations are likewise subjoined on HAHNEMANN'S ORGANUM, which may be justly styled his Gospel of Medicinal Redemption to perishing patients in the hands of their well meaning, but deluded Physicians, who may thus procure a reasonable supply of Genuine Cordial Drops from the true Balm of Gilead, extracted from the Homœopathic Laboratory for the general benefit of mankind, and the particular consolation of every Hypochondriac, Dyspeptic, Nervous Sufferer in the known world. Letter the First. By John Borthwick Gilchrist, L.L.D., &c., &c. London: Parbury, Allen, & Co., Leadenhall Street. 1833, pages 100.

Dear Sir,—I have been requested by Mr. Wakley, in returning your communications, to express how much he regrets his inability to insert them in the Lancet. Although he entertains himself opinions far different from those which you uphold, he would willingly have given your cases a place, had it not been for the determined opposition of the subscribers and readers of the Lancet to any thing in the shape of homœopathy. When your case of hæmate-mesis, [the fifth case referred to above,] was inserted last winter, we received an avalanche of letters from all parts of the country, couched in such terms as to make it next to impossible for us to insert any further communication of the kind. Mr. Wakley's personal regard for yourself has induced him to hesitate about returning your cases; but he has, at last, felt it imperative upon him to do so, and he has particularly desired me to convey to you his great regret at being compelled to take this course.

I remain, Sir, very truly yours,

HENRY BENNET, M.D., Sub-Editor.

ON THE INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT OF HOMŒOPATHY IN ENGLAND.

BY F. W. IRVINE, M.D., LEEDS.

In the preceding pages we have endeavoured to present our readers with a view of the position Homœopathy has attained in this country, as denoted by the number of its practitioners; of the Hospitals and Dispensaries devoted to its propagation; and of the Works which have been written to vindicate its principles and explain their application to practice. These particulars may be termed collectively the signs of the external development of Homœopathy in Great Britain. It would next be incumbent to consider its internal development, by which we mean the additions and improvements made in our knowledge of the theory and practice of the system. There is, it is true, another and more inward sense to be attached to the expression, viz., the degree in which the principles of Hahnemann have taken root in the minds of our practitioners, and the amount of knowledge they possess of the Materia Medica Pura. Doubtless it is only in proportion to those acquirements that Homœopathy has any real hold among us; but as no accurate estimate can be formed, or precise statements made respecting them, we must be content, in a publication which, like the present, deals alone in specific statements, to estimate the vigour and soundness of the tree by the new branches which it puts forth. We have therefore to inquire:—1st. What have the labours of British Homœopathists added to our knowledge of the conditions which govern the application of the great law, "Similia similibus curantur?" (Theory of Homœopathy.) 2nd. What have they taught us respecting the treatment of disease? (Practice of Homœopathy.) And 3rd. What have they added to our Materia Medica? (Homœopathic Provings.) Unfortunately these queries admit of very concise replies. The list given above of the various English Homœopathic Writings comprises the very few original papers on the theory of Homœopathy, and practical essays on the treatment of various diseases, which our countrymen have contributed to the general stock. As to provings of new medicines, we know of but three English ones—the elaborate proving of Kali Bichromicum,* by Dr. Drysdale; that of Sumbul.† by Mr. Cattell; and that of Cotyledon Umbilicus,‡ by Dr. Craig. Dr. Black, though he did not prove Plumbum himself, has so well arranged the collected provings, voluntary and involuntary, of others, as to almost entitle his account of this, equal to that of a proving.§

Bibliographia Homœopathica Americana.

By J. W. Metcalf, M.D., New York.

The first whisper of Homœopathy that was heard upon the Western Continent, so far as is now known, was breathed by Dr. H. B. Gram. An American by birth, he resided in his native city, Boston, until the age of twenty-one, when the death of his father, who, before his removal to this country, had held the important post of principal Secretary of the Danish West India Government, rendered it necessary for him to visit Denmark. He reached Copenhagen in 1808, and there resumed the study of medicine, which he had already commenced in this country, and prosecuted it with such success and éclat that he received the offer of the post of Assistant Surgeon in a large Military Hospital. This he accepted and retained until 1814, when he went into general practice in Copenhagen, and in the course of eleven successive years, accumulated a respectable fortune, and acquired the friendship and esteem of the most distinguished scientific men of that country. His heart, however, seems to have yearned for his native land, and in 1825, he put in practice an intention, which he had doubtless long cherished, of returning to spend the remainder of his days in America. He arrived in the city of New-York from Copenhagen on the 10th day of September, 1825. It is not known how long he had been an advocate of Homœopathy before that time, but he was a most confirmed disciple of Hahnemann on his arrival, and claimed the honor of having early adopted the new faith. His course in New-York was a chequered one. In the great commercial revolution of 1825, he lost the property he had laboriously accumulated abroad, and was thrown upon his professional resources for a living. He continued to practice until May 1839, when he suffered an attack of Apoplexy, a second of which put an end to his life on the 26th of February, 1840.

Dr. Gram was a remarkable man,—of deep, accurate, and very varied learning, and with an exceedingly ingenious and original cast of mind, it is not to be wondered at, that he produced strong impressions and exercised great influence over those with whom he came in contact. His friends were many, and affectionately attached to him, and his pupils in Homœopathy were indelibly stamped with his peculiar views. He made but one publication, which appeared in 1826.

1. The Characteristics of Homœopathia. (From Hahnemann's "Geist der homöopathischen Heillehre.") By H. B. Gram, C. M. L. New-York, 1825.

Of this pamphlet I have not been able to obtain a copy. It is said to have been nothing more than a rendering into indifferent English of the minor paper of Hahnemann, to which reference is made on the title page. It met with no success. It was laughed at by the profession, and there was as yet no public appreciative of Homœopathy.

From this time until 1833, the press seems to have been silent. In New-York, by the efforts of Gram and his pupils, Gray, Channing and others, the new doctrine was making silent but very slow progress among the laity, while in other than the great Atlantic cities of the Union, the name even, had scarcely yet appeared. In March, 1833, our learned colleague, Dr. Constantine Hering, arrived in Philadelphia from Surinam, whither he had sailed from Europe in 1826, and the prospects of Homœopathy began to brighten. A Hahnemann Society was founded in Philadelphia on the anniversary of the birthday of the master, 10th April, 1833, and before this body Dr. Hering delivered an address, which was the next publication of our school.

2. Kurze Uebersicht der homöopathischen Heilkunst, ihrer allmäligen Entstehung und jetzigen Ausbildung, von Constantin Hering, M.D., praktischem Arzte in Philadelphia. Vorgetragen in der Hahnemannschen Gesellschaft zu Philadelphia, den 18. April 1833. Philadelphia: Wesselhoeft, 1833. (Pamphlet, pp. 30.)

3. A concise View of the Rise and Progress of Homœopathic Medicine. By Constantine Hering, M.D. Translated from the German by Charles F. Matlack, M.D. Philadelphia, 1833.

The English translation of the address, by Dr. Matlack, was printed at the expense of the Society, and the German original, with a preface by the author, was subsequently published for the benefit of the numerous citizens of Pennsylvania speaking that language.

In the latter part of this year, the New-York Homœopathic Society was founded, an association of laymen and physicians, having for its object the dissemination of Homœopathy.

1835.

4. The American Journal of Homœopathia. Edited by John F. Gray, M.D., and A. Gerald Hull, M.D., New-York, 1835.

The first number of this journal appeared in February, 1835. It was in octavo form, containing forty-eight pages, every two months, and was very creditably conducted: but according to the testimony of Dr. Hull,

Digitized by UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN Original from UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

(Hom. Exam., 2, 67,) was still "too early for public opinion," and was discontinued after four numbers were issued. Homœopathy, however, had begun to attract so much attention, that in this year a person of the name of William Leo-Wolf, M.D., was induced to publish a scurrilous book, of some 270 pages, entitled, "Remarks on the Abracadabra of the 19th Century," which was aimed at the doctrine, but seems, from some cause or other, to have fallen still-born from the press.

5. Letter to the Physicians of France on Homœopathia, by the Count des Guidi, M.D. Translated by W. Channing, M.D. New-York, 1835. (Pamphlet.)

6. A concise View of the Principles of Homœopathia. By the Baron De Brunnow, of Dresden ; with introductory remarks in presenting this exposition in English to the New-York Homœopathic Society, by John L. Sullivan, A.M. New-York, 1835. (Pamphlet.)

7. A popular View of Homœopathy. By the Rev. T. R. Everest, Rector of Wickwar. 8vo. Philadelphia.

   A second edition was published, by Radde, in New-York, under the editorial care of Dr. Hull, in 1842, with notes by Dr. Gray, and an appendix, consisting of three papers, which had previously appeared in the Homœopathic Examiner.

   A society had existed for some time in the interior of Pennsylvania, under the name of the "Northampton Homœopathic Society," the moving spirit of which was Dr. Wesselhoeft, who had practised Homœopathy among the Moravian settlements in that state since about the year 1830.

   On the 27th of May, 1835, a public meeting of the friends of Homœopathy was held in Allentown, Pennsylvania, at which it was resolved to establish a hospital and school of instruction in Homœopathy. The "North American Academy of Homœopathy," which was subsequently incorporated by an Act of the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania, passed on the 25th February, 1836, was then organized, and a large amount subscribed for its support. Dr. Hering was chosen president, and delivered an address, prepared for the occasion, which was subsequently published under the following title :—

8. Ueber die Nothwendigkeit und den Nutzen der Homöopathik, gesprochen bei Eroffnung der nordamerikanischen Akademie der homöopathischen Heilkunst zu Allentown an der Lecha, den 27. May, 1835, von Constantin Hering, M.D.

9. Correspondenzblatt der homöopathischen Aertze, herausgegeben durch die nordamerikanische Akademie der homöopathischen Heilkunst zu Allentown an der Lecha, 1835, 1836.

   Fourteen numbers of this periodical were published, containing reports of cases, &c.

10. The Homœopathist, or Domestic Physician. By C. Hering, M.D., Professor in the college of Homœopathic Medicine at Allentown, Pa. First part. Allentown, 1835, pp. 177. Second part. Allentown, 1838, pp. 290.

1836.

11. Treatise upon a new manner of medical practice called Homœopathie, elucidated by comparing the high station of Homœopathie with the usual mode of practice called Allopathie; dedicated to our patients and the friends of truth and humanity. By I. G. Rosenstein, M.D., allied in practice with two skilful Homœopathic physicians, M. Biegler and M. Seitz. Albany, 1836.

12. Organon of Homœopathic Medicine, by Samuel Hahnemann. First American, from the British translation of the fourth German edition, with improvements and additions from the fifth, by the North American Academy of the Homœopathic healing art. Allentown, 1836. 8vo. pp. xxiii, 212.

    The first English edition of the Organon was published in 1833, and was translated from the fourth German edition. The present work is a reprint of the English translation, corrected by the fifth German edition, with a short preface of some half-dozen pages, by Dr. Hering. It is very well printed, with clear type, and on good paper, and formed an invaluable contribution to infant American Homœopathic Literature, for which we are indebted to the Allentown Academy and its president.

13. G. H. G. Jahr's Manual of Homœopathic Medicine. Translated from the German. With improvements and additions by C. Hering, M.D. Allentown, 1836—1838, pp. 600.

    This work forms two volumes, (usually bound in one) the first containing the provings of the remedies, and the second the repertory. It was published in five parts and contains 200 remedies.

14. A familiar Exposition of Homœopathia, or the new mode of curing diseases, illustrating its superiority over the prevalent system of medicine. By Jonas Green, M.D. Philadelphia, 1836.

15. Homöopathischer Hausarzt. Für die deutschen Bürger der Vereinigten Staaten, nach den besten vaterländischen Werken und eignen Erfahrungen bearbeitet. Von C. Hering, M.D. Professor der homöopathischen Akademie in Allentown, Pa. Allentown an der Lecha: J. Behlert, 1837. 8vo., pp. 352.

    The Domestic Physician by C. Hering. The second and subsequent editions of this exceedingly popular work were published in Germany. The last, the seventh, appeared in 1850.

16. On Homœopathic Medicine, illustrating its superiority over the other medical doctrines, with an account of the regimen to be followed during the treatment of diseases, by M. Croserio, Doctor of Medicine, President, &c., &c. Translated from the French, with notes, containing the opinions of Brera, Broussais, &c., on Homœopathia, by C. Neidhard, M.D Philadelphia: Kiderlen & Stollmeyer, 1837. (Pamphlet, pp. xi.—89.)

26. The Homœopathic Examiner. Edited by A. Gerald Hull, M.D. New-York, 1840. 8vo.

This periodical was issued monthly, commencing January, 1840, and continued to be published somewhat irregularly until January, 1844; forming three royal octavo volumes of 432, 392 and 382 pages. It was then suspended until Aug., 1845, when it was revived under the editorship of Drs. John F. Gray, and Charles J. Hempel, continued for two years and finally discontinued.

28. Letter to the Hon. ———, with reasons for examining and believing the fundamental principles of Homœopathy. By C. Ticknor, M.D. New-York, 1840. (Pamphlet, pp. 31.)

This interesting pamphlet contains the experience of the lamented Dr. Ticknor, a most intelligent, sober-minded, and honest physician of long practice in the old school, in his investigation of and conversion to Homœopathy. The following extract will explain the reason of the publication, and will also tend to show the state of feeling in regard to Homœopathy at this time:—

Various reports are coming to me, almost daily, that I am charged with entertaining heretical opinions on medical subjects—that I am the disciple and advocate of a system of medical practice which is denounced by ninety-nine in a hundred of my professional brethren, as sheer quackery and imposture—that I have, therefore, lost my reason or lack honesty, and, as a consequence, the community is to be injured. I am charged with having become the disciple and advocate of the system of medicine called Homœopathy.

There is a more weighty reason yet for thus addressing my friends. In the January number of the New-York Medical Journal there is an article upon Homœopathy, denouncing the whole system as a chimera, and all those who believe in any part or parcel thereof, as deluded or dishonest. That article was written, as the author says, in consequence of his attention having been drawn to the subject by "several spirited discussions in one of the medical societies." Those "spirited discussions," as they are called, arose from a paper which I had the honour to read before the society—a fact which is well known to all the profession and others who have ever heard of the "discussions." The article in the Journal annihilates Homœopathy most logically; but, unfortunately, the writer was so little acquainted with his subject or was so eager for victory, that all his facts, as to the reputation of the new doctrine, and its adherents abroad, are totally false. This article has been copied into some of the popular journals of the day; and as I have been the innocent cause of this diffusion of error, and having borne whatever opprobrium there is attached to it among my brethren in the city, I felt it to be incumbent upon me to ask the Editors of the Medical Journal to permit me to reply, and correct the mis-statements. My request has not been granted—the pages of the Journal are closed against me; and "as the appeal has been made to Cæsar, to Cæsar I will go."

A reprint of the English translation, with corrections and additions from various sources. The toilsome labors of the indefatigable editor have laid the cause of Homœopathy in this country under great obligations to him. This edition having been for some time entirely out of print, a third is in process of publication; the Repertory, or second volume of which, with additions, has already appeared, (1850).

42. The Homœopathic Medical Library. Materia Medica. Philadelphia: Dorsey, 1843. 8vo. (Pamphlet, pp. 24.)

This pamphlet was issued as a prospectus for a large work to be published in numbers, and to contain a translation of the provings of all the remedies of the school, commencing with the Materia Medica Pura and the Chronic Diseases. It is to be remembered that at this time those works existed only in foreign languages. The attempt, however, was too grand for the time, and was soon abandoned.

43. An Epitome of Homœopathic practice, compiled chiefly from Jahr, Rückert, Beauvais, Bönninghausen, &c. By J. T. Curtis, M.D., and J. Lillie, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1843. pp. 200.

A second edition of this little manual was published by Radde, in 1850.

44. Homœopathic Domestic Medicine, by J. Laurie, M.D. Edited by A. Gerald Hull, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1843.

A second edition was issued by the same publisher, in 1844; a fourth in 1848, and a fifth in 1849.

45. Homœopathy vindicated in a letter to J. V. C. Smith, M.D., editor of the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, containing a reply to his review of Drs. C. and L.'s "Epitome of Homœopathic Practice" with the acceptance of Dr. J. V. C. Smith's and Dr. C. A. Lee's challenges and the consequences. By James Lillie, M.D., Brooklyn, L. I. 46. The Homœopathist; or Domestic Physician, by C. Hering, M.D. Second American, with additions from the fourth German edition. Philadelphia: Behlert, 1844. 8vo. pp. 217.

The third edition was issued by Rademacher, Philadelphia, in 1846; the fourth in 1848, and the fifth in 1850. In the fourth edition, the part relating to the diseases of Women and Children was contributed by Walter Williamson, M.D., of Philadelphia, and was subsequently published as a separate work.

47. An Appeal for Homœopathy; or, remarks on the decision of the late Judge Cowen, relative to the legal rights of Homœopathic Physicians. By F. Vanderburgh, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1844. (Pamphlet, pp. 29.)

"The following circumstances called for this letter. Dr. Paine, of Newburgh, presented his diploma to the Medical Society of Orange County, for admission to the privileges of membership. He was refused on the ground of his being a Homœopathist. On applying to the Supreme Court for a mandamus to compel the Society to receive him, Judge Cowen, who presided, decided against his application."

It was in this year that the "American Institute of Homœopathy" was formed, an account of which will be found further on. (See No. 57 post.)

48. The Chronic Diseases, their specific nature and Homœopathic treatment. By Dr. Samuel Hahnemann. Translated and edited by Charles J. Hempel, M.D. With a preface by Constantine Hering, M.D. New York: Radde, 1845. 12mo. pp. 202; vols. 2, 3, 4 and 5, Antipsoric Remedies, 1846, pp. 323, 328, 378, 401.

The obligations of the American disciples of the New School to Dr. Hempel's unremitting labors are great. It is through his industry that they have been first put in possession of the great classics of Homœopathy, the works of the master.

49. Ruoff's Repertory of Homœopathic Medicine, nosologically arranged. Translated from the German, by A. 1846.

We have now arrived at a point when Homœopathy has acquired such firm hold of the feelings of the public, that its success and permanent establishment are no longer a matter of doubt. Its friends are open and bold; and its enemies, however bitter and abusive, are, nevertheless, compelled to admit that it has taken rank as an acknowledged part of medical science. Through the labors of Dr. Hempel, several valuable additions are made to our literature from foreign sources, the most important of which is the Materia Medica Pura.

56. Materia Medica Pura. By Samuel Hahnemann. Translated and edited by Charles Julius Hempel, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1846. 4 vols. 8vo. pp. 221, 194, 202, 260.

The translator has added under each remedy, both in this work and in the chronic diseases, the clinical suggestions of Noack and Trinks.

57. Additions to the Materia Medica Pura. Collected and edited by Ernst Stapf, M.D. Translated by Charles Julius Hempel, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1846. 8vo. pp. 292.

This volume contains the provings of Rhododendron, Senega, Valerian, Coffee, Sabadilla, Ranunculus bulbosus and Sceleratus, Crocus, Juniper, Clematis, Teucrium and Agnus castus, which had appeared from time to time in the Archiv; to which is added Müller's proving of Argentum nitricum, from the Austrian Journal.

Charles J. Hempel, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1846. 8vo. pp. 496.

Di. Rückert's work, of which the above is a translation, was originally published in Leipzic in 1837—the author's preface bears date November 25, 1836. It is a laborious compilation of all the published cases of cures of homœopathic remedies down to the time of publication, condensed and abridged, and with a reference to the original report of every case. This last feature, which is frequently neglected in homœopathic literature, gives the work a peculiar value to the student.

60. Transactions of the American Institute of Homœopathy, Vol. I. Philadelphia: Rademacher, 1846. 12mo. pp. 299.

We quote, as part of the history of Homœopathy, the account of the founding of the Institute, from the first pages of this volume:—

"The New-York Homœopathic Physicians' Society," in July, 1843, in view of the benefit to be derived from a mutual cultivation of the art by the various members of our school throughout the United States, appointed a committee to draft and send suitable invitations to them. They performed the duty assigned them, and on the 10th of April, 1844, a convention of the practitioners of Homœopathy of the United States, took place in the city of New-York, at the Lyceum of Natural History, upon the anniversary of the birth of the illustrious Hahnemann.

Dr. Constantine Hering, of Philadelphia, was elected President; Dr. Josiah F. Flagg, of Boston, Dr. William Channing, of New-York, Vice-Presidents; and Henry G. Dunnel, Secretary.

A preamble and resolutions in these words were adopted, viz:

Whereas, A majority of the allopathic physicians continue to deride and oppose the contributions to the materia medica that have been made by the Homœopathic School; and whereas, the state of the materia medica in both schools is such as imperatively to demand a more satisfactory arrangement and greater purity of observation, which can only be obtained by associate action on the part of those who seek diligently for truth alone; and, inasmuch as the state of the public information respecting the principles and practice of Homœopathy is so defective as to make it easy for mere pretenders to this very difficult branch of the healing art to acquire credit as proficients in the same;

Therefore, Resolved, That it is deemed expedient to establish a society entitled "The American Institute of Homœopathy;" and the following are declared to be the essential purposes of said Institute:

1st. The reformation and augmentation of the materia medica.

2d. The restraining of Physicians from pretending to be competent to practice Homœopathy who have not studied it in a careful and skilful manner.

Dr. John F. Gray was elected General Secretary of the Institute, and Dr. S. R. Kirby, Treasurer.

The convention then adjourned.

First session of the "American Institute of Homœopathy" was organized immediately after the adjournment of the Convention, on the evening of the 10th of April, 1844, at the call of the General Secretary elect.

This work contains American provings of the following remedies: Benzoic, fluoric and oxalic acids; Eupatorium perfoliatum; Kalmia latifolia; Lobelia cardinalis and inflata; Podophyllum peltatum; Sanguinaria canadensis; and Triosteum perfoliatum: with a repertory.

The institute has yearly published a small pamphlet containing the proceedings of its annnal meetings, but no further volume of transactions. It is understood, however, that one is in contemplation, and will shortly appear.

61. The American Journal of Homœopathy. By Drs. Kirby and Snow.

The first number of this semi-monthly journal, intended principally for lay readers, was issued on the 26th April, 1846. It is still published (16 pages monthly) by Dr. Kirby, and is consequently in its fifth volume, and increasing in circulation.

62. A Manual of Homœopathic Cookery, designed chiefly for the use of such persons as are under Homœopathic treatment. By the wife of a Homœopathic Physician. With additions by the wife of an American Homœopathic Physician. New-York: Radde, 1846. 18mo. pp. 176.

Translated with additions and adapted to the use of the American profession, by Charles J. Hempel, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1847—48. 2 vols. 12mo. pp. 272—204.

This is a valuable work for the student of Homœopathy, containing the results of twenty-eight years' practice of the system, by one who stands high as a physician in his native land. The third edition appeared in Germany in 1846.

72. Organon of the Specific Healing Art. By Gottlieb Ludwig Rau, M.D. Translated from the German, with an essay on the present internal condition of the Homœopathic school. By Charles Julius Hempel, M.D. New-York: Radde, 1847. 8vo. pp. 200.

The work of the independent philosopher of Giessen is too well known to need any comment. However much his brethren may have differed from him in many of his views, none have denied him the merit of patient thought, much learning and great originality. The Organon was published, I think, in 1838. Dr. Hempel's essay, mentioned in the title, is not appended to the work.

The English translation, of which the above works are reprints, seems to have been effected by the aid of a dictionary, and having been printed and published in Germany, abounded in inaccuracies of translation, and contained some gross errors of the press. The task of the American editors consisted simply in the correction of these.

In 1846, Dr. Roth, of Paris, published a French edition of Boenninghausen which Dr. Laurie has lately translated into English. The alphabetical arrangement is dropped and a methodical one adopted, which, however scientific, is by no means as convenient. The errors and omissions, too, are numerous and important, if I may judge by those which come to light on a by no means thorough examination. Boen. 14, Whiskers; 22, False sight; 52, Longing for herring, salt food and sourcrout; 97, Mild leucorrhea; 107, Cough and being obliged to swallow what is detached; 110, Cough with expectoration tasting like chronic coryza—Expectoration with musty taste; 111, Tasting like tobacco juice; 171, Uterine spasms—are specimens of omissions. Boen. 119, "Kreuz," small of the back, is translated "Sacrum," (No. 668);—Boen. 137, "Beissender Schmerz," smarting pain, is rendered "Itching pain" by Roth (No. 888) and "Pruriginous pain" by Laurie; Boen. 142, "Brennen," burning, is rendered "Ardent pain" by Roth (No. 876), and "Violent pain" by Laurie (p. 141); Boen. 206, the remedies for "sensibility of the periosteum" are transposed with those for "suppuration of the periosteum" (Nos. 1123, 1124); Boen. 254, "Nagel rippig," ribbed nails, is rendered "splitting nail" by Laurie (No. 1528); Boen. 258, "Wounds with injuries of the bones;" the remedies given under this rubric (by Roth, 846,) are those for "Warts with burning pain;" the proper ones (Con. PH-AC. Puls. RUTA, Sil.) are omitted.

79. New Manual of Homœopathic Veterinary Medicine: or the Homœopathic Treatment of the Horse, the Ox, the Sheep, the Dog, and other domestic animals. By F. A. Gunther. Translated from the third German edition, with considerable additions. Reprinted from the London edition. Boston: Clapp, 1847. 12mo. pp. 408.

80. Jahr's new Manual, (or Symptomen-Codex.) Translated, with extensive additions, from various sources. By Charles Julius Hempel, M.D., aided by James M. Quin, M.D., with a preface by Dr. C. Hering, revisions and clinical notes by Dr. J. F. Gray, contributions from Drs. A. Gerald Hull, G. W. Cook, B. F. Joslin, C, Hering, J. Jeanes, C. Neidhard, W. Williamson and J. Kitchen. New-York: Radde, 1848. 2 vols. 8vo. pp. 943—1060.

Dr. Laurie considers the amelioration and aggravation from the act of "chewing" to be the same as from "eating," although different lists of remedies are given by Boenninghausen. "Verschlimmerung beim Säugen (Stillen) der Kinder," Boen. 339, Aggravation when suckling—is completely metamorphosed by Roth, who makes it refer to the children instead of the mother, No. 1795. Laurie (1794) copies the error "in the case of children at the breast." "Adern," Boen. 134. 275., is misrendered by all the translators as referring to "blood-vessels" instead of "veins." Roth and Laurie, 1657.

A nnmber of errata are noted by Boenninghausen which have not been corrected in the American republications. I give them, with references to Hempel's edition, for the convenience of those consulting Boenninghausen, who may not have acccss to the German.

Hempel, p. 72. Stomach; Ipec. should be IPEC.
81. Gray stool; insert SEPIA.
83. Before evacuation; Bry. should be BRY.
95. Ovaria; insert KALI.
99. Menstruation protracted; Calc. should be CALC.
287. Aggravation in evening; Arg. should be ARG.
291. From want of attention; BELL. should be HELL.
308. Lying head low; insert ARG.
309. While leaning against anything; SULPH. should be SAMB.
340. In winter; insert ARG.

The errors and omissions which have been noted may by some be considered exceedingly trivial and unworthy of attention; but such should remember that accuracy the most minute is insisted upon by Boenninghausen, and sought after by his followers as the most important element of success in prescribing. Of the editions in the market at present, that of Hempel is the best.

This immense work is the most complete collection of the results of the development of Homœopathy that exists in any language at the present time. Though founded on the Symptomen-Codex of Jahr, it yet contains all that is valuable, (and much, perhaps, that is not,) in Noack and Trinks, and the results obtained by the Austrian provers up to a reasonable time before its publication. Its very bulk, however, is the greatest argument of its imperfection, and of the rawness of our system; and the ordinary practitioner, and the scientific homœopath look forward with equal eagerness, though for different reasons, to the dawning of that genius which shall reduce the Materia Medica to order, produce the touchstone for the separation of its false facts, and evolve light from its obscurity. Until then, we must accept it in its present chaos, of which these volumes are the most comprehensive and convenient manuals.

Dr. Becker, whose useful labours were cut short by an early death, was strongly captivated by the strong sense, keen wit, and rational views of the lamented Griesselich, and he has here translated and reproduced in fifty-four propositions, what may be called the creed of the rationalistic school of Homœopathy.

96. Review of Dr. S. A. Latta's pamphlet, entitled, &c., &c., by Adam Miller, M.D. Cincinnati, 1850. (Pamphlet, pp. 16.)

I have placed these three pamphlets together, as they are connected by a single thread of history. It seems that two homœopathic physicians of Cincinnati, Ohio, inserted in the public papers, on the 11th of August, 1849, a report of the cases of cholera treated by them, in which the per centage of deaths was certainly very small. This account did not at all please Dr. Latta, who, besides being a physician, was also editor of a religious newspaper, and on the 25th of the same month he attacked their report, alleging that it was not true, and professing his readiness to give facts and names. These were called for and given, and the excitement grew warm; the Homœopathic Association of Cincinnati appointed a committee to investigate the facts, who reported in favor of the physicians attacked. Their report was reviewed by the clerical doctor, and his review replied to by Dr. Miller, and the matter ended after the true polemical fashion, by both parties becoming satisfactorily confirmed in their previous opinions. It is probable, however, that the cause of Homœopathy was advanced among the laity of the Queen City by the discussion.

The prefatory note gives a succinct account of the origin and object of the Academy.

The Homœopathic physicians of the city of New-York and its vicinity, after several preliminary meetings, on the 28th day of November, 1849, organized themselves into an Association under the name of "THE HAHNEMANN ACADEMY OF MEDICINE." The preamble of the Constitution declares the assent of its subscribers to the three following truths: 1. That the law propounded by Hahnemann, "Similia similibus curantur," is a fundamental truth in the theory of Medicine and the only safe guide in its practice. 2. That the best mode of ascertaining the effects of drugs is by provings upon the healthy organism. And 3, that there is efficacy in attenuated remedies. The object of the Association is stated in the Constitution to be "the advancement of the Healing Art by mutual consultations and by public and private teaching."

On the 12th day of December, the Academy was incorporated as a Scientific Society under the general law of this State, passed April 12, 1848, by the filing in the offices of the County Clerk of the City and County of New-York and of the Secretary of State, a certificate duly acknowledged by the Executive Council, in the form required by law.

By the Bye-Laws of the Academy, the President is required to deliver an inaugural address on the second Wednesday of January in every year. The following address was delivered in pursuance of that regulation on the evening of Wednesday, January 9th, 1850, at a public meeting held at the Hope Chapel, Broadway, in the city of New-York, and is now published by order of the Academy.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE PROVINCIAL MEDICAL AND SURGICAL ASSOCIATION.

REPORT ON IRREGULAR PRACTICE.

"The following Report was brought up and unanimously agreed to.

"Your committee have, after consultation with numerous members of the Association, maturely considered the subject referred to them, and beg respectfully to suggest the adoption of the following resolutions:—

"That it is the opinion of this Association, that Homœopathy, as propounded by Hahnemann, and practised by his followers, is so utterly opposed to science and common sense, as well as so completely at variance with the experience of the Medical Profession, that it ought to be in no way or degree practised or countenanced by any regularly educated Medical practitioner.

"That Homœopathic practitioners, through the press, the platform, and the pulpit, have endeavoured to heap contempt upon the practice of Medicine and Surgery as followed by members of this Association and by the Profession at large.

"That for these reasons it is derogatory to the honour of members of this Association to hold any kind of professional intercourse with Homœopathic practitioners.

"That there are three classes of practitioners who ought not to be members of this Association; viz.—1st, real Homœopathic practitioners; 2nd, those who practice Homœopathy in combination with other systems of treatment; and 3rd, those who, under various pretences, meet in consultation or hold professional intercourse with those who practise Homœopathy.

"That a committee of seven be appointed to frame laws in accordance with these resolutions, to be submitted to the next annual meeting of the Association.

"That the thanks of this Association are eminently due, and are hereby given, to the Universities of Edinburgh and St. Andrew's, for their resolution to refuse their diplomas to practitioners of Homœopathy, but the Association feel imperatively called on to express its disapproval ot any School of Medicine which retains among its teachers any one who holds Homœopathic opinions.

"That these resolutions be printed and transmitted to all the Medical Licensing Bodies and Medical Schools in the United Kingdom, and that they likewise be inserted in the Times newspaper, the Morning Post, the North British Advertiser, Saunders's News Letter, all the British and Irish medical periodicals, and in such other journals as the council may sanction upon the recommendation of the branch Associations.

"In proposing these resolutions for the adoption of the Association, your committee are anxious to state that they are actuated by a strong sense of the importance of the subject in its relation both to humanity and morals. They most conscientiously believe that the countenance afforded to the form of charlatanry herein alluded to is detrimental to the true interests of the public, as it is subversive of that strict integrity which ought to characterise practitioners of medicine, and which has ever distinguished the profession in these kingdoms.

COUNTER-RESOLUTIONS OF THE BRITISH HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY.

DR. QUIN, President, in the Chair.

A Series of Resolutions on Homœopathy passed by the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association, at Brighton, on the 14th of August, having been read, it was resolved—

"That this Society deeply regrets that a body of gentlemen belonging to a liberal profession should resort to invective in place of argument.

"That the merits of Homœopathy being a subject of dispute between two parties in the medical world of equal professional standing, it is impossible that a resolution of one of these parties, that the views of the other 'ought to be in no degree countenanced,' can have any influence in facilitating the settlement of the question in dispute.

"That, in stigmatizing Homœopathy as an 'irregular practice,' as a 'delusion,' and an 'imposture,' the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association resort to terms of abuse which are at the command of every one; and which, while they are in every case inexcusable, unless accompanied by proofs, are especially valueless when employed to silence a new doctrine in opposition to the preconceived views of the persons by whom snch terms are used.

"That the differences between Homœopathic practitioners and their brethren of the old school being simply differences of opinion, a resolution not to hold professional intercourse with them is nothing more than the announcement of an inability on the part of the members of the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association to tolerate in others the same independence of judgment they claim for themselves.

"That, while the legislatures of two of the most important States of the American Union (Pennsylvania and Ohio) have granted Charters of Incorporation to Homœopathic Universities—while the Chambers of the Kingdom of Bavaria, of the Grand Duchy of Baden, and other German States, have authorized professorships of Homœopathy in the public Universities—while the Imperial Government of Austria has sanctioned the establishment of Homœopathic hospitals in different parts of its dominions—while, in Berlin and Moscow, similar hospitals exist—and, while one hundred beds in the Hospital of St. Marguerite (a branch of the Hôtel Dieu in Paris) are devoted to patients, who are openly treated in accordance with the Homœopathic system, by Dr. Tessier and his hospital assistants, it is to be deplored that so large a portion of the medical body in England and Scotland should not only commit themselves to personal animosities against all who may entertain the system, but should record their thanks to the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh for having endeavoured to expel from their body those of its members who practice Homœopathy, and to the Universities of Edinburgh, Aberdeen, and St. Andrew's, for having indicated an intention to deny their diploma to every student who shall refuse to give a pledge that he will not publicly profess himself a convert to its truth.

"Finally, that the British Homœopathic Society have never, as a body, either 'through the press, the pulpit, or the platform,' endeavoured to heap contempt upon their allopathic brethren, their conviction being that nothing could tend more to retard their cause than the use of taunts and imputations, in lieu of the calm statement of such evidence as from time to time it may be in their power to furnish.

"For and in the name of the British Homœopathic Society,

"FREDERICK F. QUIN, M.D., President,
"Physician to the Homœopathic Hospital, &c. &c."

OBITUARY.

BRITISH PRACTITIONERS.

DR. DAVIDS, OF MANCHESTER

Was born in Persia, in the year 1818. His parents had destined him to fill the united offices of priest and physician in the Armenian Church of his native country, but having, at an early age, embraced Christianity, and suffered great persecution from his relatives on account of his apostacy from the ancient faith, he resolved to quit his home and seek among strangers in England, that toleration his own countrymen denied him. Immediately on his arrival in Britain, Dr. Davids entered Glasgow College as a student of medicine; and, in 1840, became a graduate of the same University, as well as a member of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh. Dr. Davids was induced, by his friend Dr. Cronin, of London, to study Homœopathy—which system he ultimately embraced, and became both a useful exponant, and successful practitioner of Hahnemann's doctrines. Dr. Davids began practice in Manchester about the end of 1841, and had succeeded in establishing a good reputation, when his health gave way, and he was compelled to seek fresh vigour in a warmer and more genial clime. After a few months spent in Madeira, he again returned to Manchester, but it was not long ere the deadly power of Phthisis again enfeebled him; therefore he finally withdrew from active duty, and retired to Brixton, where he spent the last months of his life in the society of kind and devoted friends, and died in the spring of 1844.—Æt. 26.

Dr. Davids was the author of a modest little work, entitled "A Sketch of Homœopathy," which has gone through three editions, and of several articles in the medical journals. As a physician, Dr. Davids was minute and cautious in his examination and treatment of disease; his gentle deportment gained him many friends, and had his life been prolonged, he would, doubtless, have become one of the pillars of Homœopathy and an ornament to his profession.

MR. CHARLES, M.R.C.S., OF LONDON,

Author of "A glance at Symptomatology," died at the beginning of the year 1846. Mr. Charles commenced practice in Gloucestershire as an Allopath, but, on becoming convinced of the truthfulness of Homœopathy, he established himself in Orchard Street, London, and became a member of the British Homœopathic Society in 1845, only a few months before his death. His premature loss was deeply regretted by the Society, and by a numerous circle of friends.

DR. LUDWIG CALMAN, OF LONDON,

Was a native of Germany, but resided and practiced Homœopathy in the City of London. He was "a pains taking, hard working, member of his profession," but ill health, and the difficulties a young foreigner has always to encounter in beginning practice, prevented his rising to any eminence. Dr. Calman was Physician to the Homœopathic Dispensary, Southampton Road, and to the West of London Homœopathic Dispensary. He was author of a small work entitled "Homœopathy no Humbug," and translated into German many of the best English Allopathic and Homœopathic authors. Dr. Calman died of Phthisis Pulmonalis on the 16th May, 1847.

DR. HARRIS F. DUNSFORD, OF LONDON,

Was one of the first English medical practitioners who adopted the Homœopathic system of medicine. Born in the year 1808, he became a licentiate of the Apothecaries' Company in 1829—in 1830 he became a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, and settled in the City of London as a general practitioner. In 1831 he accepted the appointment of medical attendant to the family of the Marquis of Anglesey, and travelled with one of the members thereof on the continent. In 1833 he took his degree of M.D. at Freiburgh. In 1834 he returned to, and commenced practice in London, as a Homœopathic practitioner. In 1838 he published a work bearing the following title—"The Pathogenetic effect of some of the principal Homœopathic remedies." And again, in 1841, he published "The Practical Advantages of Homœopathy," which he was permitted to dedicate to Her Majesty Queen Adelaide; and was at the period of his death engaged on a translation of "Hahnemann's Therapie."

Dr. Dunsford enjoyed the personal esteem of Hahnemann, and doubtless it was from that master spirit himself, that he imbibed those large and comprehensive views of Homœopathy, which so eminently characterize his writings, and so successfully appeared in his practice. Immediately after his return to London, Dr. Dunsford's practice began to extend and increase—his quiet and gentlemanly bearing—his patient attention to the tale of the afflicted—combined with a quick apprehension of the nature of the disease laboured under, and a generally fortunate mode of treatment, so enhanced his reputation—that he speedily rose to be one of the first physicians in the city, and had the honour of prescribing for Her late Majesty the Queen Dowager during the life time of the King.

Dr. Dunsford died at London on the night of the 17th June, 1847, in the 39th year of his age; the immediate cause of his death was cerebral congestion and effusion into the ventricles. Cut down in the prime of his days, and at the very time when his talents were becoming known, his death was widely and deeply deplored, and his name to this day is held in affectionate and grateful remembrance by many of his former friends and patients.

The following is the account of the post-mortem examination, which was made by Mr. White Cooper:—

"The examination was confined to the head. Some difficulty was experienced in the preliminary steps, in consequence of the unusual density and thickness of the cranium. The necessary section having been completed, endeavours were made to remove the upper portion of the cranium, but so firmly adherent was the dura mater, that it was found impracticable to do so. During the removal of the brain, between two and three ounces of serum escaped from beneath the arachnoid, and possibly from the ventricles—the sinuses of the brain were gorged with blood—the dura mater having been reflected, the pia mater presented the appearance of great vascularity, and in the upper surface of the left hemisphere there was a small quantity of gritty deposit. The brain was of large size, and somewhat beyond the usual weight. The cerebral substance was of natural consistence, but highly vascular throughout. The lateral ventricles contained a small quantity of fluid, but there was reason to believe that a portion had previously escaped. The third ventricle was dilated. The lining membrane of the ventricles was injected. The cerebellum and pons varolii were congested, but otherwise healthy. The medulla spinalis was engorged, and much blood flowed from the divided vessels of the membranes. There appeared to have been effusion into the theca. These were the only abnormal appearances discovered on careful examination."

DR. LUTHER, OF BATH.

John Christian Luther was born in the country near Dessau, in Germany, on the 18th of May, 1816. He was the third son of Dr. J. C. W. Luther, a well known medical practitioner in Germany, and one of Hahnemann's earliest friends and followers. After receiving a thorough classical education in the Gymnasia of Dessau and Zerbst, he entered the medical academy of Dresden in the year 1838, where he remained three years. He then went to the University of Berlin to complete his medical studies; and in the year 1843, he went to Jena, where, after writing, and having publicly defended his inaugural dissertation De Arsenico Albo, he took his degree of M.D. After studying Homœopathy earnestly, and under the most favourable circumstances, he came to England, and settled in Bath in the year 1845, as a Homœopathic Physician. In 1846 he took a British degree of M.D. at the University of St. Andrews. Dr. Luther introduced Homœopathy into Bath, where his exertions and professional skill had secured him many friends, and where he remained till the autumn of 1849, when, during the prevalence of an epidemic of typhoid fever, he caught the disease in the discharge of his professional duties, and sunk under it on the 7th October, 1849. Æt. 33 years.

DR. GOODSHAW, OF DUBLIN.

The subject of this notice was born in the year 1797. From his earliest years he was distinguished by a spirit of untiring perseverance, and unassuming dignity. He early resolved to devote himself to the study and practice of medicine. Having honourably completed his college curriculum, he began practice as an Allopathic Physician in Dublin, and gradually worked himself up to a position of honour and responsibility in that capital. Dr. Goodshaw held the appointments of Physician to the Clergy Sons' School, at Lucan, and to the Dunboyne Dispensary. He was also the founder of the first Homœopathic Dispensary in Ireland. After the establishment of this charity Dr. G. resigned his connexion with Lucan School and Dunboyne Dispensary, devoting his energies to his town practice, and especially to the New Dispensary, and had the satisfaction, not only of seeing it prosper, but of witnessing the origin and successful progress of the Irish Homœopathic Society and Dispensary. On his withdrawal from the Dunboyne Dispensary, and two years after his profession of belief in Hahnemann's laws, Dr. Goodshaw was presented by the Governors of the Institution with a handsome piece of plate, and a highly flattering address, "as a memorial of esteem and respect, and as a testimony to the value of his professional services."

Dr. Goodshaw was an honourable exception to the dogma, that no man after he has attained his fortieth year changes his medical creed, as he was considerably beyond forty years of age before he began to examine Homœopathy, and having "mastered the new system of therapeutics," he had the moral courage at once to avow his convictions, and carry his principles into practice. The success attending Dr. Goodshaw's efforts on behalf of the sick, excited the envy and animosity of many of his Allopathic brethren in Dublin, who seldom shrunk from denouncing him as guilty of all manner of baseness and quackish practices. Such asperities told powerfully on the sensitive mind of Dr. Goodshaw, and materially affected his bodily health. After two years suffering from unquestionable valvular disease of the heart, Dr. Goodshaw suddenly died at Fairbrook, near Dublin, on the 27th September, 1851. Æt. 54.

"The post-mortem examination revealed an amount of cardiac disease incompatible with any prolongation of life. The heart was enormously hypertrophied, but especially the left ventricle; the muscular tissue of which was softened, and almost friable; the free edges of the mitral valve were studed with cartilaginous excrescences, which necessarily interfered with its proper functions. There was also considerable serous effusion into both the pleuræ and the pericardium."

AMERICAN PRACTITIONERS.

H. B. GRAM, M.D., NEW YORK.

Dr. Gram was the son of the principal Secretary of State of the Danish West Indian Government; by birth an American; and for a number of years Assistant Surgeon in the large Military Hospital, at Copenhagen. Dr. Gram had the honour of introducing Homœopathy into the United States, and was remarkable for his deep and varied learning, and for the influence he exercised over all with whom he came in contact; he died of apoplexy, on the 26th February, 1840.

A. C. BECKER, M.D., CAMBRIDGE, U.S.

Dr. Becker was a Russian by birth; received the first part of his education in England, and the latter part in Germany and France.

He died on the 15th January, 1849. His death is said to have been "undoubtedly occasioned by the overtasking of both body and mind in the exercise of his professional and literary duties." Dr. Becker was Editor of the "Quarterly Journal of Homœopathy," and author of several useful works on Homœopathy, besides leaving a large amount of manuscript, which he intended for the press.

R. M. STANSBURY, M.D., CALIFORNIA.

Dr. Stansbury was born in New York City, in 1807, and graduated with honour at Yale College, in 1831; he also graduated as M.D. in 1834, at the University of Pennsylvania. He began practice as an Allopath, and in 1846 openly embraced Homœopathy. He continued to practice in Brooklyn, N. Y., till 1849, when unequivocal signs of Phthisis began to develop themselves, and rendered a change of residence imperative. He resolved to settle in California, and having purchased Dr. Cragen's interest in the Hospital, at Sacramento City; he introduced, and, till the day of his death, maintained a strict Homœopathic treatment in his department of that establishment. During the ravages of cholera in 1850, Dr. Stansbury caught the disease in the discharge of his duties, and died after twenty-four hours illness, on the 5th of November, 1850. Æt. 43.

R. S. JACOBSON, M.D., NEW YORK.

Dr. Jacobson was a Physician of great promise; he died on the 31st January, 1851, of Phthisis Pulmonalis, in the 31st year of his age, deeply lamented by all who knew him.

C. B. MATTHEWS, M.D., PENNSYLVANIA.

Dr. Matthews, Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics in the Homœopathic Medical College, Pennsylvania, died of Phthisis Pulmonalis, on the 27th May, 1851. Dr. Matthews was at one time Editor of the "Medical Recorder," and Consulting Physician to the "Frankfort Asylum for the Insane." He practiced his profession with zeal and honour for a period of nearly thirty years, and died deeply regretted, both by his colleagues and his students.

WILLIAM INGALLS, SEN., M.D.,

Was born at Newburyport, Mass., May 3rd, 1769, and received his degree of B.A. at Haward University, in 1790. At the same University he took his degree of M.B. in 1794, and in 1801, that of M.D. He was for many years Professor of Anatomy and Surgery in Brown University. Dr. Ingalls was one of a committee appointed to prepare a Topographical work on Anatomy, and from his knowledge of the subject, and extensive learning, largely contributed to the success of that work. He retired from public practice in the year 1834, and employed part of his time in examining the doctrines of Homœopathy, which he fully embraced in 1842, and died on the 8th of September, 1851, a constant adherent of similia similibus curantur. Æt. 82 years.

CONTINENTAL PRACTITIONERS.

SAMUEL HAHNEMANN, M.D., PARIS.

Dr. Hahnemann was born at Meissen, in Saxony, on the 10th April, 1755. His father was employed as a china painter in a manufactory on the banks of the Elbe. He began the study of medicine first at Leipzic, then at Vienna, and finally graduated at Erlangen in 1779; he then returned to his native village, where he remained till the spring of 1781; then removed to Dessau. In 1782, he was appointed official Physician at Gommern; where he employed his spare time in the study of Chemistry, &c. In 1785, he removed to Dresden, where he published his celebrated Treatise on Poisoning by Arsenic, which, to this day, is quoted as a standard authority. In 1789, he removed to Leipzic; in 1791, was elected a member of the Academy of Science at Menz. It was in 1790, when engaged in translating the Materia Medica of the distinguished Cullen, that he first caught the idea of establishing a new law of cure; this idea he improved and extended, both by observation and experiment, till 1796, when he proclaimed his discovery to the world, and published it in Hufeland's Journal. In 1806, his "Medicine of Experience" appeared; this was followed, in 1810, by the first edition of his "Organon of Medicine," which contained a full elaboration of the whole system of similia similibus; and, than which the entire literature of medicine does not embrace a more masterly or logical dissertation. Five editions of this work appeared respectively in 1810, 19, 24, 29, and 33, besides having been translated into the English, French, Italian, Russian, Prussian, and Hungarian languages. In 1795, Hahnemann migrated to Wolfenbüttal, from which place he was driven out in 1799, by the united persecutions of its apothecaries and physicians. After wandering over various parts of Germany, he again returned to Leipzic in 1810, where crowds of patients and admirers flocked around him, and fortune seemed at last to favour him. During his residence in Leipzic, Hahnemann published many useful papers. In 1821, the tide of fortune again turned, and Hahnemann was compelled to quit Leipzic. He next sought an asylum in Cœthen; where he dwelt peacefully under the protection and patronage of the reigning Prince. From this period (1823) Hahnemann's star began to ascend; persons from all quarters of Europe came to consult him, and his advance was steadily onwards to honour, fortune, and fame. In 1827, he communicated to Drs. Stapf and Gross his theory of the origin of Chronic Diseases. In 1829, the first public gathering of Homœopathists was held, and the "Central Society of German Homœopathists" formed. In 1835, he removed to Paris, where, through the influence of M. Guizot, he obtained authority to practice, and where he continued till his death, which event occured on the 2nd July, 1843, in the 89th year of his age.

DR. GEO. A. H. SCHWEIKERT, OF BRESLAU.

Dr. Schweikert was born at Zerbst, on the 25th September, 1774, and died at Breslau, on the 15th December, 1845; he was one of Hahnemann's earliest disciples, and was much esteemed for his learning and unwearied zeal.

DR. MUHLENBEIN, OF SCHONINGEN.

Geo. A. H. Mühlenbein, Doctor of Medicine, Privy Counsellor, Knight of the Order of Henry the Lion, &c. &c., died at Schöningen, on the 8th January, 1846, in the 81st year ot his age. Dr. M. took his degree of M.D. at Helmstadt, in 1789, and began practice in Königslutter, where he formed an acquaintance with Hahnemann, and was the first medical man who introduced vaccination into the district. It was not till the year 1826, and after he had practiced in the old school for thirty-three years, that he embraced Homœopathy, publicly declaring his conversion in the sixth vol. of the ARCHIV. During the remainder of his life he practised Homœopathy with great success, and has been termed the "Apostle of Homœopathy" in the north of Germany. He endeavoured to obtain the repeal of the law against the dispensing of medicines by physicians in Brunswick, but was only successful in securing the establishment of a Homœopathic Pharmacy.

DR. MABIT, OF BORDEAUX.

The Courrier de la "Gironde," of the 13th May, 1847, says that the death of Dr. Mabit "produced a great sensation in Bordeaux. No man ever departed this life amidst such deep regret and such universal sympathy." He was born at Toulouse, on the 24th January, 1751, and entered the army as Surgeon, in which capacity he served in Italy and France—was wounded at French Cape and taken prisoner in England. In 1815, he returned to Bordeaux, where he was induced to settle, and was appointed Professor in the secondary School of Medicine, and Physician to the Hospital of St. Andrew. He was the friend of Laennec, from whom he received a stethoscope, turned by his own hand. In 1829, he was elected a member of the Board of Health. In 1832, he was sent to England to study cholera; and as a reward for all his services, was about this time named Chevalier of the Legion of Honour. Dr. Mabit replied to the report of the French Academy of Medicine on Homœopathy; and published several memoirs, the result of his own experience, on the same subject. At the time of his death he was engaged on a work on internal pathology, which contains the collected observations of forty-five years practice. Dr. Mabit died in May, 1847, in the 66th year of his age.

DR. S. T. THORER, OF GORLITZ,

Was born at Görlitz on the 25th April, 1795, and died at the same place on the 25th June, 1846. Dr. Thorer was an able as well as frequent writer on Homœopathy—he was a constant contributor to the pages of the ARCHIV.

SURGEON TIETZE, OF EBERSBACH.

Dr. G. J. Ruckert has written a short memoir of this distinguished practitioner, from which we learn that Von Tietze was born near Löban, on the 29th July, 1799—that his father was a schoolmaster—that he studied at the Gymnasium at Bauzen, and the Medico-Chirurgical Academy at Dresden—and that he entered on the practical part of his career in 1820. We are told further that he regarded Homœopathy as an absurdity, and was compelled, in spite of himself, to yield belief in the doctrine, by reason of some works on the subject, which had been given him to read in 1828. He afterwards became an enthusiastic Homœopathist, and died of typhus abdominalis, on the 23rd June, 1847. Æt. 48.

Digitized by UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN Original from UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

DR. GRIESSELICH

Occupied the situation of Staff-surgeon in the army, and met his death by a fall from his horse while riding from Altma to Hamburgh, on the 23rd August, 1847. He was regarded as the leader of the "Homœopathic Specific School," and distinguished for his opposition to some of the dogmas of Hahnemann. He was editor of the "Hygea," the publication of which, in consequence of his melancholy death, has been suspended for a time.

DR. J. J. MOLIN, PARIS.

Jean Jacques Molin was born at Annecy, (Savoy), on the 13th June, 1797. He entered the army when he was 16, and attained the rank of lieutenant. In 1829, after studying medicine, he graduated as M.D. at Strasburgh. In 1831, he was appointed Inspector of the Thermal Springs of Luxeuil, which situation he resigned in 1836, in order that he might devote his time to the practice of Homœopathy in Paris. Dr. Molin was a member of most of the Literary and Scientific Societies in France—the Spanish Medical Institute, and of the Brazilian Homœopathic Medical Academy. He was twice elected President of the Société de Médicine Homœopathique, and published the Journal de la Doctrine Hahnemannienne, in two vols. The success attending Dr. Molin's practice in Paris was very great—the high position he held greatly tended to the spread of the cause in that city. Towards the end of May, 1847, a suspicious tumour appeared on the side of the inferior maxilla, which led Dr. Molin to suspect cancer; on the tumour being incised, numerous vegetations were discovered, and extensive suppuration established, which, with his inability (owing to carcinomatous excrescences) to take proper nourishment, at length put a period to his valuable life on the 3rd of September, 1847, in the 51st year of his age.

DR. G. W. GROSS, JUTERBOGK,

Was the son of a Clergyman—born on the 6th September, 1794. At first destined for the clerical profession, he was sent to the Cathedral School at Naumburgh, where he caught scabies, to the improper treatment of which he was wont to ascribe his usually delicate health; after this he resolved to study medicine. Having gone to Leipzic, he was introduced to Hahnemann (in 1815) and soon became his warmest disciple. In 1817, he settled in Jüterbogk, where his practice, during the latter years of his life, averaged about 3,000 cases per annum. In 1843, he was appointed, by the King of Prussia, member of the Board of Examiners for Homœopathic Physicians. Dr. Gross was co-editor of the Neues Archiv. He died on the 16th September, 1847. Æt. 54.

DR. WIDNMANN, MUNICH,

Was born on the 19th March, 1765—studied theology at Dillingen—graduated in medicine at Wurzburg in 1792—settled as a Physician in Wallerstein, was appointed Court Physician of Eischstradt in 1798—subsequently he occupied the situation of body Physician to the Prince-bishop, and then was created a Medical Counsellor. In 1817, he was appointed body Physician to the Duke of Lenchtenberg. He was converted to Homœopathy by observing a scarlet rash appear on the body of his son after a large dose of Belladonna. Dr. Widnmann died on the 28th January, 1848, in the 83rd year of his age. His writings are distributed throughout Hufeland's Journal and the Hygea.

DR. LEDURE, OF PARIS.

Victor Ledure was born in Paris of opulent parents in 1813. He studied at Montpellier and graduated at Paris. When cholera raged in 1848, Dr. Ledure was devoted and unwearied in his efforts to stay its ravages among the neglected poor. On the 11th June, 1848, at midnight, he was seized, and died, as the devoted physician too often dies, a victim to the very pestilence he was labouring to arrest.

DR. GIRAUD, OF PARIS,

Having adopted the medical profession and completed his studies, was offered a Surgeoncy in the Navy, but declined it. He.

settled in Hermencault, where he formed a large obstetric practice. In 1838, he quitted this place for Paris. Some years after his arrival in the capital, he became a convert to Homœopathy, and was expelled from the Medical Society of the arrondissement to which he belonged, for his Homœopathic tendencies. Dr. G. died of cholera on the 4th June, 1848, in his 57th year.

DR. D'AMADOR, OF MONTPELLIER,

Was Professor of Pathology in the School of Montpellier. He was greatly distinguished as a brilliant orator and elegant writer. He died suddenly on the 3rd August, 1848.

DR. M. MULLER, OF LEIPZIC,

Was born on the 1st August, 1784. Took the degree of M.A. in 1809. In 1810 graduated as M.D. In his 21st year he was appointed first Clinical Lecturer and under Surgeon in Jacob's Hospital. On the death of Dr. Rheinhold, he succeeded to a large practice, and owing to his talents and agreeable manners became exceedingly popular. In 1828, he was ordered to treat a member of the royal family without consultation with the court Physician. Dr. Müller was instrumental in obtaining the formation of the Leipzic Homœopathic Hospital, and the formation of the New Homœopathic Society. Besides attending to the numerous duties of a large practice, he found time to enquire into the history of many disorders, and to deliver and publish a series of Lectures on Homœopathy. He died on the 24th September, 1848, of cholera. Æt. 64.
