And the little chippy-bird went in and told her family all about it. She thought she could keep a better school herself; and I shouldn't wonder a bit if she could.

Romp and sing and shout away,
Happy little boys!
May the game of Life you play
Be as full of joys.

And he thought of the dear Lord Jesus,
Who held him close and true, —
Who cares for the little sparrows,
And His little drummers too.

So into the fight went the drummer,
And "rub-a-dub-dub" went his drum,
For every beat of his drum-sticks
Called the soldiers to come.

A TREASURE OF A BABY.

She came to our house, I will frankly confess,
Done up in a bundle, and labelled
"Express;"
But what was the bundle? Why, no one could guess.

But when it was opened they shouted
"How jolly!"
Though grandma considered it very great
folly,
For Bessie, dear children, is only a dolly!

box, you know. I think it's very cruel to keep poor little insects and butterflies shut up like that."

We should never do to poor helpless animals what we would not like ourselves.

she took him out in a lovely flower-garden, and set him to pulling up weeds and finding little bugs on rose-bushes. There was enough work to keep him busy all that afternoon; and the lady found him work for many days to come. Carl went home that night with a happy heart; and in a few days he paid all his mother's rent.
