THE END OF SUMMER

HARUMI SETOUCHI

Translated by Janine Beichman

Winner of the Women's Literary Award in 1963, this autobiographical novel explores the conflicting emotions of a mother towards her abandoned child, against the background of a life moving from sensuality to asceticism. Intensely introspective in form, this novel contains moving intimations of the author's decision to become a Buddhist nun.

The Lotus Sutra in Japanese Culture

George J. Tanabe, Jr., and Willa Jane Tanabe, editors

Japanese and North American scholars from the fields of history, religion, art, and literature examine the Lotus Sutra in the first systematic attempt in a Western language to study this important Buddhist text. The essays describe how doctrine and worship, meaning and ritual, ideology and power, didactics and aesthetics have been intertwined in the long and fascinating history of the sutra. Brides of the Sea Port Cities of Asia from the Sixteenth to the Twentieth Centuries

Frank Broeze, editor

The port cities of Asia described in Brides of the Sea stretch from the Pacific to the Philippines and Japan, and from the east coast of Africa northwards to Saudi Arabia. These coastal settlements formed a string of closely related regional systems connecting their hinterlands to the long-distance sea routes. The contributors to this pioneering historical work are economists, sociologists, anthropologists, geographers, and architects as well as historians. Illustrated. $32.00, cloth

States of South Asia Problems of National Integration Essays in Honour of W. H. Morris-Jones

A. Jeyaratnam Wilson and Dennis Dalton, editors

"A successful effort to look anew at South Asia on the eve of Independence, investigate the inherent strains occasioned by nationhood, and . . . take a closer look at political structures thirty-five years after Independence. . . . By presenting each national study in juxtaposition with those of neighboring South Asian nations, the obvious contrasts and comparisons emerge in often dramatic fashion. . . . A welcomed addition to South Asian scholarship . . . useful to both the scholar and classroom."

Tea in Japan

Essays on the History of Chanoyu

Paul Varley and Kumukura Isao, editors

Far more than a tea-drinking "ceremony," chanoyu embraces a wide range of artistic pursuits. Moreover, tea masters of the past were not only arbiters of taste but confidants of rulers. This first major history of chanoyu written in English is highly informative on the arts and cultural history and provides insights into the relationship between culture and rule in premodern Japan. New ASIAN STUDIES from California

A History of Modern Tibet, 1913-1951

The Demise of the Lamaist State
MELVYN C. GOLDSTEIN

The "Tibetan Question," the nature of Tibet's political status vis-à-vis China, has been the subject of often bitterly competing views while the facts of the issue have not been fully accessible to interested observers. In contrast, this comprehensive study of modern Tibetan history presents a detailed, non-partisan account of the demise of the Lamaist state. Drawing on a wealth of British, American, and Indian diplomatic records; first-hand-historical accounts written by Tibetan participants; and extensive interviews with former Tibetan officials, monastic leaders, soldiers, and traders, Goldstein meticulously examines what happened and why.

Medicine in Rural China

A Personal Account
C. C. CHEN
In Collaboration with
Frederica M. Bunge

This highly personal account brings the perspective of a dedicated clinician to the challenge of alleviating health problems in often widely scattered and undereducated village populations. It is the story of practical experimentation in rural health development, a story of trial and error and a continuing search for the best solutions to difficult problems. Principles such as community responsibility and self help, now promoted in most primary health care programs, were fully recognized by Dr. Chen and his associates more than 40 years before the World Health Assembly declaration at Alma Ata in the Soviet Union in 1977, which called for "health for all by the year 2000."

WHEN SINGAPORE FELL

Evacuations and Escapes, 1941-42

Joseph Kennedy

From December 7, 1941 to February 15, 1942, Japanese military forces invaded and conquered Malaya and Singapore in what Winston Churchill was to describe as the "worst disaster" of the Second World War. The British were able to evacuate a few inhabitants but many individuals and groups made their own last-minute attempts to escape from Singapore and subsequent imprisonment under the Japanese. This book tells the story of these escapes, quoting first-hand sources whenever possible.

CHINA UNDER DENG XIAOPING

Political and Economic Reform

David Wen-Wei Chang

Foreword by Robert A. Scalapino

Modern China has gone through stages of chaos and crisis: from empire, to democratic republic, to Sovietized Marxian dictatorship, and now is nearing the end of a Dengist decentralizing reform. This book looks at the nation's history and assesses its likely future. Chang suggests that although the intra-party factional struggle will continue, the reformers will be successful in the end.

AMERICAN CONCENTRATION CAMPS

A Documentary History of the Relocation and Incarceration of Japanese Americans, 1942-1946

Selected and Edited by ROGER DANIELS, University of Cincinnati

This meticulously researched series documents the U.S. Government's decision and subsequent policy to relocate and incarcerate Japanese Americans during World War II. The documents reproduced are drawn mainly from the archives of the War Department and the United States Army. They detail the execution and modification of the policy during the course of the war, and bring to light the strong rifts that developed among those responsible for the internment.

Included in the set are: The Munson Report, dealing with alleged disloyalty of Japanese Americans; the degree of support that existed for governmental policies affecting Japanese Americans; the Senate debate on a bill to authorize the incarceration of any person of Japanese ancestry; and the Army report of deficient living and sanitary conditions of Assembly Centers.

9-volume set: $790. Volumes are also available separately and are individually priced.

CENTER FOR CHINESE STUDIES

FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

The Center for Chinese Studies would like to announce a newly-established fellowship program designed to assist foreign Sinologists to carry out research in the R.O.C. The program is open to professors, associate professors, assistant professors, and doctoral candidates at university departments concerned with Chinese Studies, which are located outside the Republic of China. The program is also open to researchers at research institutions outside the R.O.C. that are related to the field of Chinese Studies.

Research subjects should fall within the field of Chinese Studies. However, subjects related to contemporary Chinese politics, economics, or the military are excluded, since the research work of these subjects is sponsored by other institutions.

The fellowship provides a research subsidy based on the length of research tenure in the R.O.C., which is set at a period of three months to one year. Scholars in need of travel funds may also apply for travel grants to the R.O.C. The final deadline for receipt of applications and all supporting materials is October 31 of any given year, for research projects beginning after July 1 of the following year. Further information and application forms may be obtained by writing the Liaison Division, Center for Chinese Studies, 20 Chungshan South Road, Taipei 10040, Taiwan, R.O.C.

How do firms become motivated to adopt small-group activities? How do they acquire expertise in these activities?

Strategies for Learning

Small-Group Activities in American, Japanese, and Swedish Industry

Robert E. Cole

Cole addresses these issues through an examination of small-group activities in the United States, Japan, and Sweden during the past 25 years. He explores the differences in the willingness and ability of private sector firms to engage in building national organizations designed to assist companies adopting small-group activities. He finds that American firms have been only moderately willing to engage in such institution building while the Swedes and the Japanese have shown a far greater willingness. This is especially true of the Japanese, who have built a highly successful national organization. These striking national differences reflect the varied historical experience of each country and, perhaps more important for the future, have serious competitive implications. $29.95

A fresh and compelling comparative analysis of Asian labor movements.

Beneath the Miracle

Labor Subordination in the New Asian Industrialism

Frederic C. Deyo

This important study examines the dynamics of the remarkable economic transformation of South Korea, Singapore, Taiwan, and Hong Kong, which has been based in large measure on the production of manufactured goods for export. The competitive edge of these countries has in turn been rooted in the mobilization of a low-cost, disciplined, and productive workforce. Deyo explains how East Asian governments and employers have attempted to manage this workforce. He also explores the extent to which workers are able to challenge management decisions and insert working-class agendas into public policy. $30.00

The Japanese experience demonstrates not only how steep the price of success can be but also the enduring effects of culture over structure.

Japan's Administrative Elite

B. C. Koh

A major player in Japanese society is its government bureaucracy. Neither Japan's phenomenal track record in the world marketplace nor its remarkable success in managing its domestic affairs can be understood without insight into how its government bureaucracy works—how its elite administrators are recruited, socialized, and promoted; how they interact among themselves and with other principal players in Japan, notably politicians; how they are rewarded; and what happens to them when they retire at a relatively young age. Yet, despite its pivotal importance, there is no comprehensive and up-to-date study of Japan's administrative elite in the English language. Koh fills that gap. $38.50

The World Around
the Chinese Artist
Aspects of Realism in
Chinese Painting

The World Around the Chinese Artist discusses the central tension of much Chinese art, the relationship between the physical reality of the world and the subjective reality of those who interpret the world through their art. Edwards focuses on three Chinese masters of landscape painting, Hsia Kuei, Shen Chou, and Shi-t'ao, and on their involvement with the world they sought to portray.

High Religion

A Cultural and Political History of Sherpa Buddhism

Sherry B. Ortner

Sherry Ortner is the first anthropologist to integrate social scientific and historical modes of analysis in a study of the Sherpa monasteries and one of the very few to attempt such an account for Buddhist monasteries anywhere. Combining ethnographic and oral-historical methods, she scrutinizes the interplay of political and cultural factors in the events culminating in the monastery foundations. Her work constitutes a major advance both in our knowledge of Sherpa buddhism and in the integration of anthropological and historical modes of analysis.

Meaning and Power in a Southeast Asian Realm

Shelly Errington

The ruler in the Indic States of Southeast Asia was seen not as the "head of state" but as the center or navel of the world. Like polities, persons and houses were and are viewed as centered spaces (locations) where spiritual potency can gather. Shelly Errington explores the politics of constituting and maintaining such centered socio-political spaces in a former Indic State called Luwu, which lies in South Sulawesi (Celebes), Indonesia. The meaning of political life and the ways its cultural forms were and are sustained depend on locally construed ideas of "power" or spiritual potency and "the person," which the author explores in detail.
