till it was spoken in the last moments of existence.

Thus it happened, in the tale we have told, that prejudice, obstinately indulged, prevented the discovery of an important truth, and kept the mind that was the subject of it wrapped in gloom and sorrow for years, which might otherwise have been blessed by the realizing of its fondest hopes and wishes. And thus prejudice often prevents a man from discovering that the object of his dislike, could he see and know him as he is, is indeed a man — and, as such, a brother.

he uttered a piercing shriek, and, in the paroxysm of his distress, he awoke! It was, however, a lucky dream; for the youth took warning by it, and, conquering his indolence, he became industrious, and grew up a prosperous and happy man.

Reader, if thou art given to indolence, take heed by Peter's dream; and, like him, turn from the error of thy ways. Deem not that indolence is bliss; believe, rather, that the ways of industry are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

serve me. You have lost your shilling, your situation, and your character. Go! and henceforth learn that 'honesty is the best policy.'"

By this time, the boy discovered, to his amazement, his assistant in the person of the duke; and the duke was so delighted with the sterling worth and honesty of the boy, that he ordered him to be sent to school, and to be provided for at his own expense.

thought — I don't know what I thought. I guess I didn't think at all; or, if I did, I thought it was all a kind of play. But I know better now. I see that, when people are at work, they are not playing, but are doing something useful; and when mother sets me to work, I mean always to consider that she has a good and useful object in view, and that I must do it, not because it is play, but because it will do some good."

"Very well," said Tom. "I hope you will always do so." By this time, the husking was done, and I came away.

James had a sad time of it. It was at least three weeks before he got quite well. But the event was a good lesson to him. Whenever, in after life, he was tempted to disobey his mother, he said to himself — "Mother knows best: remember the thorn!" Whenever he was tempted to seize upon any forbidden pleasure, he would always sav - "Remember the thorn!"
