DAVID KASER will become director of libraries at Cornell University next August 1. Presently director of the Joint University Libraries at

Dr. Kaser

Nashville, Tennessee, Dr. Kaser will thus succeed on the Ithaca Campus Dr. Stephen A. McCarthy, who recently left the post after twenty-one years to become the executive director of the Association of Research Libraries.

Dr. Kaser is in his eighth year in his present assignment. Prior to coming to Nashville he was assistant director for technical services in the Washington University libraries in St. Louis. He has also served on the library staffs of the University of Michigan and Ball State University.

The new director-elect at Cornell holds a bachelors degree from Houghton College, a masters degree from Notre Dame and a second masters and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Michigan. He has written several books and some two-score articles and has been editor of College & Research Libraries since 1963. He is currently on leave from the Joint University Libraries studying book pirating and smuggling in the Orient under a Guggenheim Fellowship. Dr. Kaser is president-elect of ACRL. For fuller biographical information, see CRL, XXI (May 1960) 237 and CRL News XXVIII (July/August 1967) 157.

JOHN DAVID MARSHALL has been appointed university librarian of Middle Tennessee State University at Murfreesboro. He succeeds Catherine Clark, who had served as librarian for the past twenty years. She has relinquished her administrative post but will remain on the library staff as associate librarian.

John David graduated from Bethel College in McKenzie, Tennessee, with BA degree in 1950 and received his library degree from Florida State University in 1951.

During 1951/52 he was enrolled in the graduate school of Florida State University for further graduate study in library science and history, and served as an administrative assistant in the office of Louis Shores. Following his formal education he began his career as reference librarian at Clemson University from 1952 to 1955. From 1955 to 1957, he was head of the reference department at Auburn University. In 1957 he became head of the acquisitions division at the University of Georgia libraries, a position he held for a decade.

He is active in state, regional, and national library associations, and is a member of Beta Phi Mu and Phi Kappa Phi. He served as a member of the ACRL Publications Committee, 1957-1962, was secretary of the Georgia Library Association's Library Resources and Technical Services Section, 1963-65, is vice chairman and chairman-elect of the Southeastern Regional Group of Resources and Technical Services Librarians of the Southeastern Library Association, and is a member of Southern Books Competition Committee of Southeastern Library Association. He has been active in the American Library History Roundtable, and delivered a paper at the Cleveland Conference in 1961.

In literary and editorial activities it is impossible to list all of his assignments and contributions. He serves as general editor of the Contributions to Library Literature Series published by Shoe String Press and has edited three of the volumes in this series; the first of these, Books-Libraries-Librarians, has proved useful as a library school text. He served as a book reviewer for Library Journal from 1953 to 1964, was a contributing editor of the Southern Observer (1953-66), and is presently Book Review Editor of Journal of Library History. For one to get a true picture of John David Marshall as bookman and librarian it is necessary to read two of his works, Books in Your Life (1959), and A Fable of Tomorrow's Library, (1965).

He is an avid book collector and has a growing collection of the works of three authors—Louis Shores, Lawrence Clark Powell, and Sir Winston S. Churchill. His interest in Churchill started during his early school days, but was spurred on when he heard Churchill deliver his famous "iron curtain" speech at Westminster College, Fulton, Missouri, on March 5, 1946.

With his background in public services and technical processing, and his literary accomplishments, he should make a real contribution to a growing university.—A. Ray Rowland, Augusta College

FRED FOLMER became librarian of the University of Texas at Austin on September 1. He succeeds Alexander Moffit, librarian since 1945, who is now consultant for library development in the university system.

Mr. Folmer had been associate university librarian since 1946. He was assistant librarian at Wayne State College, Nebraska, 1937-38, and supervisor of departmental libraries at the State University of Iowa, 1938-42. From 1942-44 he served in the U.S. Coast Guard. A native of Kentucky, he holds the BS in LS from George Peabody College and the AMLS from the University of Michigan.

In 1962 the Texas Library Association named him Texas Librarian of the Year for his association work and for his contributions to library administration, education, and buildings.

Two years after he arrived in Texas, Mr. Folmer was elected chairman of the College and University Libraries Division of the Texas Library Association, and in 1953-54 he was TLA president. Through association committee work he has contributed to Texas' Plan for Statewide Library Development and to the formulation of a library systems bill which the 1969 Texas Legislature will be asked to enact. He was a member of the Steering Committee of the First Texas Governor's Conference on Libraries in 1966.

Many practicing librarians were once his students at the graduate school of library science of the University of Texas, where as part-time lecturer from 1948 to 1959 he taught courses in library organization, government publications, and college and university libraries.

He has served officially as building consultant for several Texas libraries and unofficially for a great many more. In recent years at the university he has been involved in the planning of the $4.5 million undergraduate library and academic center, which opened in 1963, and the collections deposit library, which will be completed late this year. At various stages of planning or construction are a $10.7 million east campus complex which, in addition to the Lyndon Baines Johnson library, will house the university's Latin American and Texana collections and a library for the Lyndon Baines Johnson school of public service; a $7 million humanities research center, a graduate library building; and new biology, engineering, and physics-mathematics-astronomy libraries within departmental buildings.

Mr. Folmer

By appointing Mr. Folmer, Chancellor Harry Ransom has wisely given continuity to the library's administration. In turn Mr. Folmer will, by his proven competence and resourcefulness, give continuity to the library's development as a major national resource center. Heartsill H. Young, University of Texas.

NECROLOGY

RICHARD FREDELL, assistant to the director of libraries at Washington University, died on Sept. 7.

RUTH F. MORTON, catalog librarian in University of Houston library, died on Oct. 17. She had been catalog librarian since 1952 and has been responsible for the reclassification of the University of Houston libraries from Dewey to L.C.

The ALA Headquarters Library receives frequent requests for sample copies of handbooks for four-year college and university libraries. Therefore, we would be grateful if librarians from these institutions would forward two copies of their handbooks to the Headquarters Library, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Helen Oustinoff.
She found a way to order and process books faster with the Polaroid CU-5 Camera.

Helen Oustinoff is Assistant Director of the University of Vermont Library. She has developed a remarkable new system for processing books, utilizing our Polaroid CU-5 Close-up Land Camera.

No more checking or transcribing

Here's how her system works: When a book purchase request slip is received, the searcher looks up the book in the National Union Catalog or another standard bibliography. Just as always. But she doesn't bother to correct or complete the slip. She simply photographs the entire N.U.C. entry with the CU-5 Camera.

We make that sound very easy. It is. You just center the CU-5's frame over the entry and squeeze the trigger. Pull the tabs and 15 seconds later you have an enlarged print of the whole thing. (Like the one below.) Isn't that easier than copying by hand? And faster? And more accurate?

No handwriting to decipher

Now the book order slip is typed from the Polaroid print. And the print is then filed away with a carbon of the typed order.

If the original entry happens to be in Hebrew, or something else untypable, you can simply shoot an extra print and send it along with the order.

When the book is received, it's checked against the print and the invoice is cleared.

No waiting for catalog cards

Who needs preprinted catalog cards? With this new system, you make your own. Using the Polaroid print as a guide, you can type them on an automatic typewriter. Or simply add necessary information to the print and run it through a copying machine.

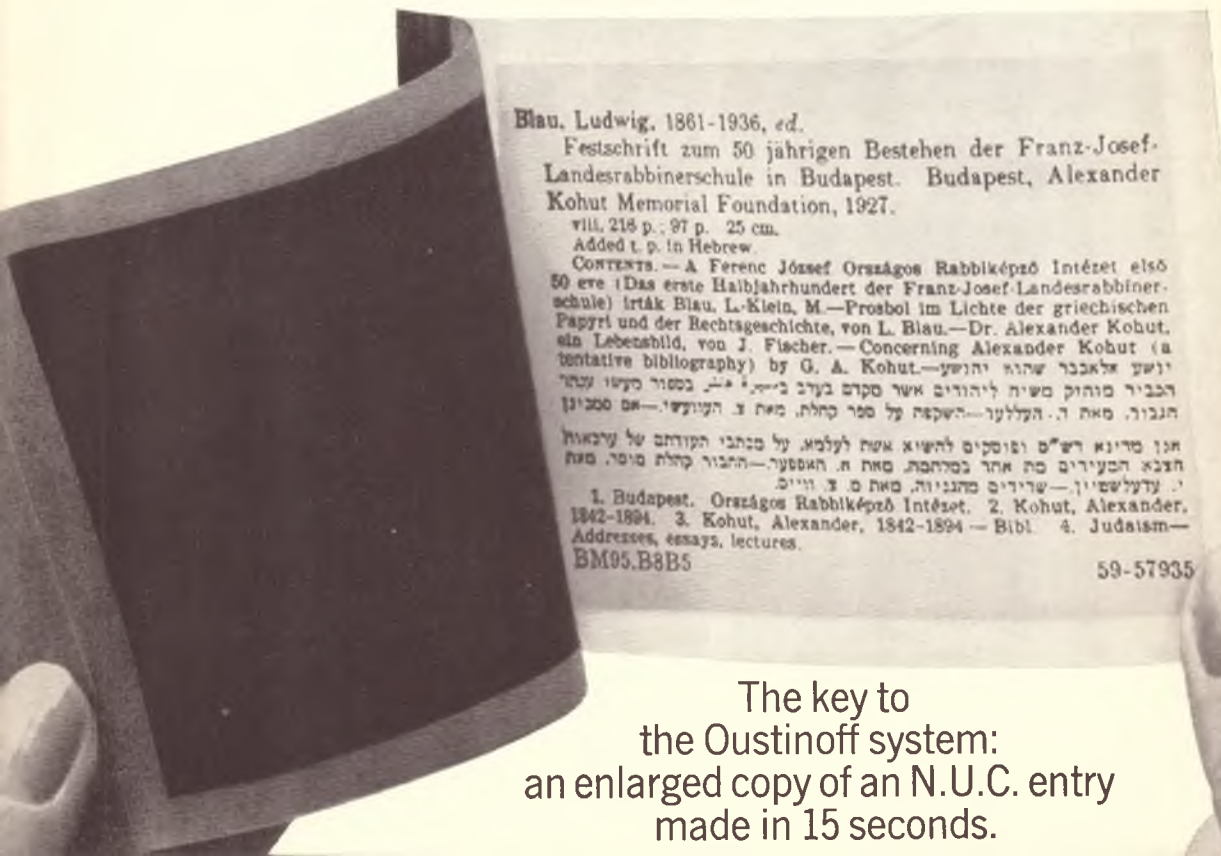

The system also gets books into circulation faster because it eliminates waiting for preprinted cards. It also eliminates the job of ordering them. And the cost.

For more information about the time and cost saving features of this library system, write to: Polaroid Corporation, Dept. 113, Cambridge, Mass. 02139.

And if you have any suggestions as to new uses for our CU-5 Camera, send them along.

Who knows? You might be our next ad.
