DON L. BOSSEAU was appointed director of libraries at Emory University on January 1, 1974, upon the retirement of Guy Lyle. Mr.

Don L. Bosseau

Bosseau comes to Emory after two years as director of the University of Texas at El Paso libraries. Prior to that he spent six years at the University of California, San Diego, first as head of the systems development department and later as assistant university librarian.

Throughout his career Mr. Bosseau has been interested (and expert) in the field of library systems. He is currently editor of JOLA Technical Communications and president-elect of the Library Automation Research and Consulting Association. While at San Diego he designed an improved serials processing system and a subject authority system. Another interest is the development of greater staff participation in decision making, which he worked on while at El Paso.

Mr. Bosseau has an MS in Nuclear Engineering as well as a Master's in Library Science. He has written numerous articles, reports, and papers about automated serials systems, and is a member of several ALA committees.

Mr. Bosseau's comments about his new job follow: "With the new research library at Emory, one problem requiring attention is working toward the goal of turning the old library building into a modern undergraduate library and media resources center (this will involve fund raising). Also to hedge against erosion of the book budget caused by inflation, I would like to establish a substantial endowment for book funds at Emory. As a private institution, I think this is the best method of protecting the book budget. With a background in library systems development and automation, I am very interested in the SOLINET operation and the directions it will take."

Chancellor Dean E. McHenry recently announced the appointment of DAVID W. HERON as university librarian at the University of California, Santa Cruz. The appointment becomes effective July 1, 1974.

Heron succeeds Donald T. Clark, UCSC's founding librarian, who retired last June.

Wendell W. Simons will continue to serve as acting university librarian at UCSC until Heron's arrival.

Currently director of libraries at the University of Kansas, Heron, 53, is a graduate of Pomona College (1942), where he majored in English. He also holds a Bachelor of Library Science degree from UC Berkeley (1948) and an M.A. degree in political science from UCLA (1951).

He began his career as a reference librarian at UCLA in 1948 and held that position until 1952, when he became librarian of the American Embassy in Tokyo. He returned to UCLA in 1953 as staff assistant to the librarian. Two years later he joined the Stanford University library staff and later was named director of libraries at the University of Nevada. He held that post until 1968, when he undertook his present position at the University of Kansas.
