Retirements

WILMA REID CIPOLLA, Undergraduate Library director at the State University of New York at Buffalo, retired in June.

HEIDI DUDA, librarian in the Information Services Department at the Countway Library of Medicine, Harvard University, retired in May.

MARGUERITE F. FOGLEMAN, associate librarian at Reese Library, Augusta College, retired in June after 26 years of service.

TYRUS G. HARMSEN retired in June from Occidental College where he served as college librarian from 1959–86, and as director of the Book Arts Program and professor of bibliography from 1986–91. Harmsen planned the major extension of the Mary Norton Clapp Library which opened in 1971, and gave particular attention to the development of the collections. Additions to the special collections included the E. T. Guymon Collection of Detective and Mystery Fiction and important additions to the Robinson Jeffers Collection. Since Jeffers's death in 1962, Harmsen has been instrumental in the publication of the Robinson Jeffers Newsletter. As a member of ALA, he served as secretary of the Rare Books and Manuscripts Section in 1959–60, and was a program participant in the pre-conferences at Charlottesville, Oberlin, Austin, and Los Angeles. Since 1955 he has served as treasurer of the Rounce & Coffin Club which sponsors the annual Western Books Exhibition.

JESSIE HOWES, catalog librarian at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, retired in June after more than 40 years in the MIT libraries. Howes worked at Harvard's Widener Library for a year after graduating from Radcliffe College, then received her MLS from Simmons College. She joined the Catalog Department at MIT in 1947.

WILLARD (TED) HUNSBERGER, assistant director of Helmke Library, Indiana University-Purdue University, Fort Wayne, retired last summer after 23 years of service. Hunsberger made his mark on the library by planning it, moving it from Kettler Hall to its present location with a "book walk" in 1972, and introducing the use of microcomputers there. A graduate of Goshen College, Temple University, and Florida State University, Hunsberger taught at Texas Women's University and worked as a librarian at IIT. He also taught and worked as a librarian for six years in Guam. Following a sabbatical leave in 1980, he published Clarence Darrow: A Bibliography. He has been active in the Indiana University Library Association, the Technical Services Division, and the College and University Division.

EILEEN KIBRICK, serials cataloger at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, retired in June after 40 years of service. Kibrick began her career at MIT as a general assistant filling in at all the libraries as needed. She then worked as assistant engineering librarian and life sciences librarian while she studied for her MLS, which she received from Simmons College in 1958. She spent most of her post-degree career in the Catalog Department as a monograph cataloger for engineering titles.

KEVIN LEONARD, associate university archivist at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, retired in June to assume the full-time position of caring for his three children.

Deaths

LILLIAN BUCHANAN, director of Western Carolina University (WCU) Library from 1932–67, died in May at the age of 94. Buchanan was the first woman to achieve the rank of full professor at WCU and was a leader in state and regional library associations. She also helped organize the first public library in Sylva, North Carolina.

MARGARET ELIZABETH (BETH) MILLER, coordinator of the Cooperative (Work/Study) Program at the University of Western Ontario's (UWO) School of Library and Information Science, died in May. Miller was active in the library and information field in both Canada and the United States. She served as president of the Canadian Library Association from 1985–86, and of the Ontario Library Association from 1982–83. She was the first recipient of the Ontario College and University Librarian Association Award of Merit in 1985. She was particularly involved in accreditation issues, serving as a member of the steering committee, ALA/USDE Committee of Accreditation from 1984–86, and as chair of the CLA Special President's Committee on Canadian Accreditation from 1983–86. She was also a member of the present ALA Standards Revision Committee. On the international scene, Miller was secretary of the Continuing Professional Education Round Table of the International Federation of Library Associations.

Before joining the SLIS staff, Miller was UWO's head of Rare Books and Special Collections at the D.B. Weldon Library. She received an MLS from UWO and a B.A. from Acadia University.

DOWNING E. O'HARRA, former library director at Wichita State University (WSU), died in June at the age of 88. A native of Illinois, O'Harra graduated from Southwestern College in Winfield, Kansas, in 1925, then received his MALS from the University of Illinois in 1928. He worked at U of I as a librarian from 1928 to 1935, when he accepted a position as head librarian at WSU. During his career he published a number of professional articles and planned two new buildings—Morrison Library (1939) and Ablah Library (1962). After retiring in 1972, he received Southwestern College's Mound Builder Award in 1981 and a Kansas Library Association President's Award in 1985 in recognition of his outstanding contributions to Kansas libraries.
