

• The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, has acquired the manuscript and book collections of micrographics pioneer Vernon Dale Tate. The collection, which takes up approximately 230 linear feet, covers the history of micrographics and related subjects such as photoduplication, photography, and information storage and retrieval. Included in the gift are Tate's personal and professional papers, and records of the National Microfilm Association which Tate collected as NMA executive secretary and archivist. The collection chronicles Tate's career in microphotography from his years at the Library of Congress, the National Archives, as director of libraries at MIT, and as librarian and archivist for the U.S. Naval Academy.

• The University of Wyoming Library, Laramie, has received the 1789 Kehl edition of the works of Voltaire in 72 volumes. Published under the direction of Beaumarchais, it forms the first posthumous edition of the complete works and is the basis for all subsequent editions. This particular set was once owned by the American geologist Louis Agassiz (1807-1873) as well as Civil War General Regis de Trobriand.

Wyoming has also obtained the library of Professor William B. Hunter Jr., an internationally known Milton scholar. The collection is especially rich in literature, history, theology, and philosophy, and was built patiently by Hunter over 30 years of teaching and scholarship. ■■

ALANET now has electronic interlibrary loan forms

ALANET, the ALA electronic mail and information service, has made available electronic forms for interlibrary loan and photocopy requests. Subscribers wishing to borrow books or obtain photocopies from member libraries can complete the forms online by interacting with the system, which prompts the user for each element of the request. Alternatively, participants with microcomputers or word processors can prepare a series of loan or photocopy requests offline, then transmit them online at high speed to save connect time. The forms are transmitted instantly to the “electronic mailbox” of the lending library, and when the recipient receives the request, the borrower automatically receives an acknowledgment. The electronic mail system can be used for reports and other communications between borrowing and lending libraries. The forms are prototype standards developed by Z39 Subcommittee AA. For information on ALANET and its services, contact: Joel M. Lee, ALANET System Manager, ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, IL 60611; (312) 944-6780; ALANET ID ALA0001. ■■
