JOHN MONTAG, the state librarian of Iowa, has been appointed director of the library at Wittenberg University, Springfield, Ohio, effective July 1.

As head of the State Library of Iowa, he supervised a staff of more than 40 persons with a budget in excess of $2 million. Before assuming his current position, Montag was assistant professor of libraries at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln and reference and liaison librarian and instructor of library science at Concordia College in Minnesota. He is a graduate of Midland Lutheran College in Nebraska and holds an MLS from the University of Iowa.

In his new position Montag will administer Thomas Library, a facility built for $6 million and dedicated in 1982.

SUSAN K. NUTTER has been named director of libraries at North Carolina State University, Raleigh, effective August 1. Nutter will replace Isaac T. Littleton, who is retiring after directing NCSU's libraries for more than two decades.

Nutter, associate director for collection management and technical services at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Libraries, has 20 years of experience in research library work. In her new job she will be responsible for NCSU's 1.2 million-volume collection, the university's D.H. Hill Library and five branch libraries, and the 165 employees who work in the NCSU libraries.

Nutter has been a member of the MIT libraries staff for more than 17 years. At MIT she has served as associate head of the engineering libraries, as resources and technical services librarian and in three positions with Project INTREX, a pioneering experiment in information transfer and library automation. She also spent a year on leave from MIT as a Council on Library Resources academic library management intern at UNC-Chapel Hill during 1979-1980.

Nutter received her bachelor's degree from Colby College in Waterville, Maine. She earned her MLS at Simmons College in Boston and a certificate from the administrative development program in MIT's Alfred P. Sloan School of Management. Additional studies include the graduate program in management at Babson College in Wellesley, Massachusetts.

A member of ALA, Nutter also holds memberships or committee assignments with the Association of Research Libraries, and the American Society for Information Science.

JOAN R. GIESECKE has been appointed assistant dean of automation and technical services at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, effective April 6.

Giesecke had been at George Mason University from 1978 in different capacities, including administrator for the North Campus Branch Library, the administrator for collection management, and associate librarian. Prior to this experience, she was business reference librarian and assistant department head for adult services at Prince George's County Memorial Library System.

Giesecke has a bachelor's degree in economics from SUNY-Buffalo (1973), an MLS from the University of Maryland (1973), a master's degree in management from Central Michigan University (1979), and is nearing completion of a doctorate in public administration from George Mason University.

She has served as a consultant on staff development issues and has presented several papers on library automation. She has been active in local, state, and national library organizations.

Deaths

ZDISLAVA KOHAK, former librarian of the University of Maryland's Munich, Germany, campus, died March 18 in Hanson, Massachusetts. She had been retired since the early 1970s. Born in Czechoslovakia, Kohak majored in English and philosophy and studied abroad in Angoulême, France, and at Rockford College in Illinois, where she was one of the first exchange students. After earning a doctorate at Charles Prague University in Czechoslovakia, she taught at various gymnasiums. Her career was interrupted by the Second World War, when she spent eight months in Gestapo prisons for involvement in underground resistance activities. After settling in the United States, Kohak earned an MLS at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, New York, and worked in the Specialized Divisions at the Queensborough Public Library before coming to Maryland.

ELVA LEONORE KROGH, retired assistant chief of the Dewey Decimal Classification System at the Library of Congress, died May 3 at age 88. Krogh entered government service in 1936 as principal research assistant at the Works Progress Administration in Washington, D.C. She joined the Library of Congress in 1939 as a Dewey Decimal System classifier and became head of the Office in 1964. She retired in 1968. Krogh received bachelor's and master's degrees in library science from the University of Illinois and was a high school teacher in Nebraska and Iowa before entering the library profession.

JUDITH K. MOWERY, assistant director of the library at the University of Akron, Ohio, died suddenly at her home March 2 at the age of 43. A lifelong resident of Akron, Mowery earned a bachelor's degree from Ohio University (1964), an MLS from Case Western Reserve University (1966), and a doctorate in library science from Indiana University (1986). She had been at the University of Akron since 1967 and worked previously at the Akron Public Library. A member of ACRL, Mowery was currently serving as director of the board of the Ohio Library Association.

IRENE ROBERTS, subject cataloger in the Social Sciences II Section of the Subject Cataloging Division at the Library of Congress, died April 27 in Alexandria, Virginia. Born in Tallinn, Estonia, Roberts grew up in York, Pennsylvania, and began her career at the Library of Congress in 1965 as a library assistant in the Exchange and Gifts Division while a student at the American University in Washington, D.C. She was awarded a bachelor's degree in 1967 while working on the Cyrillic Bibliographic Project. Roberts joined the staff of the Subject Cataloging Division in 1968 as a member of the Humanities Section and transferred to the Social Sciences Section in 1975, then to the Social Sciences II Section in 1979. ■ ■
