• Western New England College, Springfield, Massachusetts, is embarking on a project to donate books from the general collection in D'Amour Library to the Munzatsi Secondary

School in Maragoli, Kenya. The Munzatsi Secondary School just completed construction of a new library this summer, but the library has very few books. The college is donating slightly outdated books and duplicate copies of books in its collection. The volumes cover a broad area of knowledge—everything from classic literature to textbooks. ■■ of Washington since 1969, retired on June 30, 1989. His career began as a reference librarian in the Engineering Library at the University of Illinois in 1956. From 1957 to 1962 he was a reference librarian in the Science and Technology Department of the Rochester (N.Y.) Public Library. Subsequent positions held were assistant director of libraries for science and technology, University of Nebraska, and head of Engineering Libraries at Ohio State University. At the University of Washington he established a Patent Depository Library as part of the Engineering collection and saw the installation of CD-ROMs in the Engineering Library.

Deaths

HERBERT B. ANSTAETT, librarian emeritus at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, died on November 5. He had served as head librarian at Franklin and Marshall from 1927 to 1967, when he retired and became librarian emeritus and bibliographer. He served as acquisitions librarian at the Millersville University Library from 1969 until his second retirement in 1976. In 1940 he was appointed curator of the Historical Society of the Reformed Church and in recent years he worked as a genealogist at the Evangelical and Reformed Historical Society, where he served as executive secretary. Anstaett was editor of Books in Print from 1953 to 1957, and he co-edited the first edition of the Subject Guide to Books in Print in 1957. He served on the first ACRL Board of Directors in 1939–1940, as president of the Pennsylvania Library Association from 1945 to 1946, and for many years on the Board of Directors of the Lancaster Free Public Library. Anstaett was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Miami University, Ohio, in 1924. He received a bachelor's degree in library science from Columbia University in 1927 and an MLS from Columbia in 1932.

ALA Minority Fellowship

The American Library Association is inviting applications from racial and ethnic minority professional librarians interested in acquiring association management experience and analyzing current library issues. Applicants will be asked to indicate the ALA division(s) in which they would be most interested in working as part of the fellowship program. All ALA divisions, including ACRL, are interested in hosting a fellow.

ALA's goal is to help eliminate the barriers that prevent minority librarians and information scientists from participating fully in the profession. The Association recognizes that one institution or professional association alone cannot eliminate the barriers, but strongly believes that professional associations have a significant role to play and must provide leadership by example.

The objectives of the ALA Minority Program fellowship are:

- To provide an opportunity for minority librarians to gain an in-depth understanding of association management, ALA's structure and operations, and ALA policy formulation and implementation.

- To develop a cadre of minority librarian leaders by providing opportunities for minority librarians to gain an in-depth understanding of national professional issues.

- To provide an opportunity for minority librarians to increase their visibility in the profession by developing working relationships with staff leaders and member leaders in the American Library Association.

- To improve the upward mobility potential of minority librarians by providing another type of administrative experience.

- To make the American Library Association better known and more visible to minorities and minority librarians, and affect the perceptions and recruitment of more minorities into both the profession and the American Library Association.

Fellowship applicants must be librarians or information professionals and hold a master's degree either from an ALA-accredited library science program or from a program that meets the ALA/AASL curriculum guidelines within a unit accredited by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education. Applicants must have a minimum of three years of professional working experience in a library or information science environment, and must be an ALA member at the start of the fellowship.

The 1990–1991 stipend for the ALA Minority Fellow is $30,000, plus medical, dental, and retirement benefits. To obtain more information about the program, or to apply for a fellowship, contact the ALA Office for Library Outreach Services (OLOS), 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, IL 60611-2795; (800) 545-2433; in Illinois, (800) 545-2444; in Canada, (800) 545-2455.

The deadline for applications is March 23, 1990. ■ ■

DAVID BISHOP, university librarian at the University of California, San Francisco, since 1977, died November 30. Bishop had directed his efforts the past few years in planning for a new library that is scheduled for completion late this year. Since 1968 he had served as a consultant to the National Library of Medicine, and in 1986 he was invited to serve as an expert consultant for the national planning guidelines for U.S. academic health science libraries and for the National Library of Medicine's long-range plan. Bishop graduated from Dalhousie University, Nova Scotia, with a bachelor's degree in economics and earned an MLS from Columbia University.

His interest in health science libraries began at the Los Angeles County Medical Association, where he got his first job as a junior librarian and later became head reference librarian. He later joined the UCLA Biomedical Library, where he designed and acquired the collection for the new UCLA School of Dentistry. Bishop's later positions included librarian for the University of Arizona Medical School (1965-1971), medical librarian at McGill University (1971-1973), and director of the Library of Medicine at the University of Nebraska Medical Center (1973-1977). He had been active for more than 30 years in the Medical Library Association, which honored him with its President's Award for editorship of the Handbook of Medical Library Practice (1989) and a Janet Doe Lectureship (1976). He also received the distinguished service award of the Group on Public Relations of the Association of American Medical Colleges (1976) and was named librarian of the year in 1970 by the Arizona State Library Association.

WILLIAM R. BRANDT, library director emeritus of Ripon College, Wisconsin, died November 18 after a long illness. After receiving an MLS from Columbia University, Brandt worked in the Reference Division of the New York Public Library until 1949, when he took a position as cataloger at the New York University Club Library. In 1952 he was appointed librarian at Ripon College, where he helped Wisconsin academic librarians form a division of the Wisconsin Library Association.

DALE E. CASPER, director of the Newton Gresham Library at Sam Houston State University, died November 25. He had held that position since April 1988. Prior to that he had served as social science collection coordinator at Michigan State University, beginning in 1982. Casper was the author of bibliographies on urban America, Richard Nixon, and Lyndon Johnson, and most recently wrote Historic Houses: Architects' Records of Past Accomplishments, 1983-1988. He earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan, a master's and Ph.D. in history and an MLS from the University of Minnesota.

GEORGE KOSMAN, head of government documents at Case Western Reserve University, died suddenly on September 22. He had been with Case Western since 1966 and had been government documents librarian since 1967. In 1981 he accepted the additional responsibility of serving as collection development librarian for the Department of Theatre and Dance. Kosman served on both the ALA Public Documents Committee and the Constitution Committee of the Government Documents Round Table.

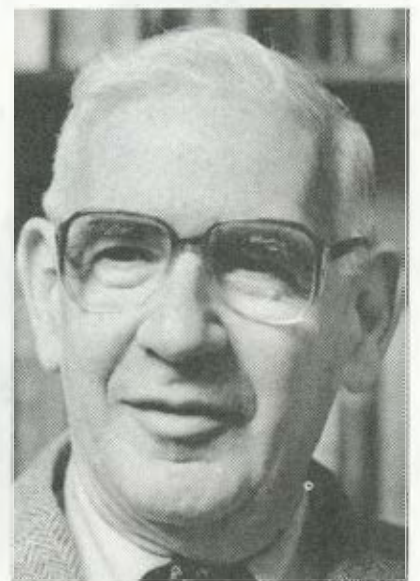

LUCY LEE LANCASTER, retired assistant science librarian at Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, died December 14 after an illness of several months. Lancaster was one of the first women to enroll at the university when it was opened to women in 1921. A member of the Class of 1925, she was one of five women in a student body of 975. Lancaster began working in the library as a student assistant in 1923. Following her graduation, she spent a year at the New York State Library School, returned to Blacksburg for three years, and then took a one-year leave of absence to receive an MLS in 1931 from Columbia University. She returned to Virginia Tech where she worked until her retirement in 1975 at the age of 70.

MELISSA LANDERS, assistant librarian for public services at the Gallagher Law Library, University of Washington, died on August 21.

WILLIAM F. MAYLES, librarian in the Science and Engineering Library at Indiana University-Purdue University, Indianapolis, from 1966 to 1988, died on December 3.

MARILYN POTTS-GUIN, librarian of the Hatfield Marine Science Center, Oregon State University, Corvallis, died on December 2. A leader in marine science librarianship, she had recently returned from Chile where she had been consulting with libraries on automation projects.

ROBERT ROSENTHAL, an authority on the use of books for scholarship and on antiquarian book collecting, died December 27 in Edinburgh, Scotland, at the age of 63. He had built the rare book collections at the University of Chicago Library into a major research facility. Rosenthal, curator of special collections at the university's Regenstein Library, suffered a heart attack on a train he had boarded as he and his wife were traveling to Manchester, England, en route back to Chicago. They had been in Scotland to see friends and visit booksellers.

Robert Rosenthal

A member of the library staff since 1950, Rosenthal had overseen the Department of Special Collections since 1954. He received a bachelor's degree in 1949 from Indiana University and an MLS in 1955 from the University of Chicago. He began working as an assistant curator at the University Library in 1950. He was offered the job after expressing an interest in the university's historical book collection while a student at the Graduate Library School. He became a lecturer in the library school in 1958.

Rosenthal spoke widely around the country on the role of books in scholarship. He was an author of numerous articles on that subject, including "The Scholar's Right to Know Versus the Individual's Right to Privacy," based on a talk he gave that was published by Rockefeller Press in 1976. As a researcher, he was interested in social movements and the distribution of books in 19th- and early 20th-century America.

WARREN ALLEN SAWYER, director of libraries and learning resource centers at the Medical University of South Carolina, Charleston, died at his home on November 23 after a long illness. He had held that post since June 1968. His earlier positions included director of the library at the College of Charleston (1966-1968) and librarian at the Augusta Military Academy, Fort Defiance, Virginia. He received a bachelor's degree from Hampden-Sydney College in Virginia and an MLS from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Sawyer was founder of the Consortium of Southern Biomedical Libraries and served on the Biomedical Library Review Committee of the National Library of Medicine from 1976 to 1980 and on the Executive Committee of the Southeastern Regional Medical Library Program from 1968 to 1982.

He planned the Medical University's new library in 1970, its learning resource center in 1977, developed satellite library learning resource centers in the Area Health Education Centers statewide, and coordinated installation of an integrated library system in 1984.

KATHARINE M. STOKES, retired consultant to college libraries for the U.S. Office of Education, died October 21 at Baltimore County Hospital at the age of 83. A native of Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania, Stokes attended Wilson College in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, and was a graduate of Simmons College Library School in Boston. She received her doctorate from the University of Michigan.

Stokes's distinguished career began with the Harrisburg Public Library and continued at Swarthmore College and the University of Illinois. She was named director of the library at Western Michigan University and later joined the U.S. Office of Education as college specialist.

After retirement she consulted for the U.S. Equal Rights Commission and served as general

NEW PUBLICATIONS

- Bibliography of New Orleans Imprints, 1764-1864, by Florence M. Jumonville (760 pages, 1989), provides full bibliographic descriptions for 3,388 books, pamphlets, and ephemera from the first 100 years of printing in New Orleans. Entries are arranged chronologically, with indexes for printers, publishers, authors and titles. Location information is given for each title, and the author provides an intriguing history of early New Orleans publishing in a well-documented introduction. Copies may be ordered for $59.95 (plus $2.50 shipping) from the Historic New Orleans Collection, 533 Royal Street, New Orleans, LA 70130-2179. ISBN 0-917860-25-X.

- The Boston Theological Institute Union List of Serials (1989 edition, microfiche) contains authoritative CONSER records for more than 10,000 theology and related serials titles held by the libraries of its member institutions, nine graduate theological schools in the Boston area. The list also contains detailed holdings statements. It is available for $27.95 from the Boston Theological Institute, Library Development Office, 45 Francis Ave., Cambridge, MA 02138.

- The Broadside Collection of the Vermont Historical Society: A User's Guide (14 pages, November 1989) describes the society's ephemera collection and how it catalogs and stores the 7,500 items dating from the late 18th century to the present. Included in the guide is a list of 200 subject categories developed by the staff for filing state and local history broadsides. A computer printout of the authority file for the society's subject filing system is also available. To obtain a copy of the guide, send $2.00 (plus $1.00 postage) to Reidun Nuquist, Librarian, Vermont Historical Society, Pavilion Building, Montpelier, VT 05602.

- Campus Strategies for Libraries and Electronic Information, edited by Caroline Arms (404 pages, October 1989), has been published as part of an EDUCOM strategies series on information technology. This volume describes, through case studies written by participants, the planning and implementation of library and information systems at ten academic institutions in the United States. An emphasis has been given to information in electronic form. The academic chapters and their authors are: Northwestern University (John P. MacGowan, Karen L. Horny, Betsy Baker); Clemson University (George D. Alexander, Richard W. Meyer); University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (William Mischo, Beth Sandore, Sharon E. Clark, Michael Gorman); Brigham Young University Law Library (David A. Thomas); Georgia Institute of Technology (Miriam A. Drake); University of Southern California (Margaret L.
