PROFILES

Effective in September of 1972, Richard A. Farley became director of libraries at McGill University, Montreal, Quebec. His position is a newly created one established on the recommendation of the McGill University Libraries Commission. His primary task as director of libraries will be to implement the recommendations of the commission. The specific recommendation that will be of immediate concern will be to establish five "area" libraries within the Mc-Gill system to answer the library problem encountered by a large urban university.

The growth environment at McGill will not be an unfamiliar one to Mr. Farley. During his tenure at Kansas State University from 1966-1972 he was responsible for the construction of a two and one half million dollar building addition and saw the total library budget increase by 300 percent.

He has served the profession in many capacities. He has been a member of ALA Council, president of the Kansas Library Association and has served on the Ad Hoc Committee for the National Agricultural Library to study an Agricultural Sciences Information Network.

Q.

WHY LIBRARY BINDING?

Library Binding is a special kind of binding developed primarily for libraries, and includes the initial hardcover binding of periodicals, the rebinding of used books and the pre-binding of new books — all in accordance with the LBI Standard.

By specifying low cost library binding for all your binding requirements, you can save thousands of dollars in your budget (amount dependent upon size of original budget) because each volume will withstand 100 or more circulations, over four times the number provided by a publisher's library edition. This new-found money can then be used to purchase new titles, thereby increasing the size of your collection without substantially increasing the budget.
