

manities to preserve and catalog the Joseph J. Pennell collection of 32,000 glass negatives taken by the Junction City, Kansas, photographer between 1888 and 1922. The significance of the collection lies in the completeness with which it documents daily life in a midwestern town and a nearby Army post (Fort Riley) during a period of change and growth.

The Kansas Collection has also been awarded a National Historical Publications and Records Commission supplemental grant of $8,000 to continue microfilming a selected portion of the J.B. Watkins papers. Watkins was a 19th-century Lawrence business entrepreneur who operated a land mortgage company.

•York University Law Library, Downsview, Ontario, has received a grant of $8,000 from Canada's Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council to assist in the collection of English nominative law reports. These original 18th-century reports will strengthen the library's collection of British primary source material. ■■

Lockwood to retire from Choice magazine

Louise Lockwood, associate editor of Choice, has announced her retirement at the end of December 1984. Lockwood joined the staff during the magazine's first year of publication. She was named associate editor in 1972. Choice, ACRL's publication of reviews of materials suitable for libraries serving undergraduates, began publishing in March 1964 on the campus of Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut, and in 1965 moved to a private office in town.

Louise Lockwood

Lockwood graduated from Bryn Mawr College in 1945 with a degree in psychology and later did graduate work at City College of New York and Southern Connecticut State University. From 1947 to 1951 she worked as a psychologist at the Brearley School in New York City.

In mid-1964, after several years of raising three children, she joined Choice at the invitation of Richard K. Gardner, the magazine's founding editor. As assistant editor from 1964 to 1972, she was primarily responsible for books in the social sciences and humanities. Of the 120,000 publications reviewed by Choice since 1964, Lockwood selected and edited the reviews for approximately 30,000.

Next year she plans to do some traveling and editorial consulting, and will also return to her hobby of making ceramics.

During the twenty years that Lockwood has been affiliated with the magazine, Choice has grown from a publication with 1,165 subscribers, chiefly college and university libraries, to one with over 4,000 subscribers. College and university library subscribers have been joined by public, school, and special libraries as well as publishers and individuals. In 1968 Choice began offering subscribers the opportunity to purchase Reviews-On-Cards as well as the magazine; nearly 1,000 libraries currently subscribe to this service.

Choice has also expanded from 3,388 reviews in its first volume to 6,611 reviews in its twentieth volume. In 1980 Choice began including reviews of non-print materials and has most recently added reviews of computer software. In addition to publishing the magazine and the cards, Choice also occasionally publishes items in its Bibliographical Essay Series; this series has included the "Opening Day Collection" and most recently, the third edition of "Building a Children's Literature Collection." ■ ■ retired in 1955, he worked to achieve a remarkable renaissance of the University's neglected libraries. He also served a five-year term as executive secretary of the Association of Research Libraries, and played a major role in the Farmington Plan and rebuilding the war-ravaged libraries of Europe.

After his retirement from Penn at the age of 70, David went on to plan and establish the Eleutherian Mills Historical Library, a major research collection for American business and industrial history, at Longwood, Delaware. Then he established the Maritime Library at the Mystic Seaport Museum in Connecticut. During these "retirement" years he also served as chairman of the Board of Trustees at West Chester State Teachers College and guided it through a difficult transition.—Richard De Gennaro, University of Pennsylvania.

JOHN M. SEKERAK, former agricultural sciences librarian at the University of California, Davis, died on April 2 in Sacramento. He previously held positions at Modesto Junior College and American River College, and also undertook foreign assignments for the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization in Sudan and Bangladesh. His subject bibliography, Grapes, Viticulture, Wine and Wine Making, was sponsored in 1975 by the American Society of Enologists.

CAROLINE M. SHILLABER, former librarian of the Graduate School of Design, Harvard University, died on March 22. She had been associated with Harvard since 1931, when she became assistant librarian of what was then the library of the Departments of Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning. In 1951 she moved to MIT, where she served until 1963 as librarian of the Rotch Library of Architecture and Urban Planning. In that year she returned to Harvard as librarian of the Graduate School of Design.

JOLAN G. SZENDREY, of the Department of Special Collections and Archives, Rutgers University, died on April 12. She had been with the Rutgers libraries for 33 years and was well known for her work as agricultural librarian at the College of Agriculture and Environmental Science. She also worked as associate librarian at the Library of Science and Medicine. ■■

NEW TECHNOLOGY

• Alos Micrographics Corporation has developed a desk-size rollfilm reader-printer that utilizes a dry printing process. The reader is for 16mm rollfilm in open reels or cartridges. Film drive and film tension are controlled by solid-state electronics. The dry printing process produces high resolution, high contrast positive prints from both positive and negative films. The use of monocomponent toner makes toner refill simple. Contact: Alos Micrographics Corp., P.O. Box 407, Walden, NY 12586; (914) 778-7511.

• CLASS has announced a multi-user version of its Checkmate serials control software system that allows access to the system from more than one location, so that up to three persons can check in periodicals or look up records for reference. The system works with a TRS-80 Model 16 microcomputer, and requires a Xenix operating system and a hard disk containing at least 8 megabytes. The cost is $4,500. The single-user version of Checkmate will continue to be available for IBM PC and IBM PC-XT microcomputers only. Contact: CLASS, 1415

Koll Circle, Suite 101, San Jose, CA 95112; (408) 289-1756.

• Collector's Data Service is a new database that will go online on June 15. Designed to provide buyers and sellers of fine collectibles with a comprehensive communications link, it may also be of service to special collections and acquisitions librarians. Available to anyone with access to a computer and modem, the service has no membership fees, minimums, or monthly charges—the only costs are for connect time for users and listings for sellers, both handled by on the spot credit card validation. The major categories of collectibles include rare books, art, musical instruments, antiques, and stamps. Lists of stolen property will be carried, along with newsletters, events calendars, auction listings, and shows. For more information, contact Collector's Data Service, 420 W. Mercer, Seattle, WA 98119; (800) 435-0100.

• The Dukane Corporation now offers a Manual Direct Projection microfilm reader which projects sharp images downward through high resolution
