

David Farmer, director of Southern Methodist University's DeGolyer Library, has been awarded the Maura Award from the Women's Center of Dallas for his efforts to further the issues of women. The award is named for Women's Center of Dallas founder Maura Anderson McNiel, whose lifelong commitment to mentoring women and finding solutions to women's problems has helped the center bridge differences among women of all ages and stages of development. Farmer, only the sixth man to receive the award, was selected for his efforts to preserve women's history with the creation of SMU's Archives of Women of the Southwest. The collection includes diaries, correspondence, lectures, and files documenting the roles of women in business, law, medicine, government, education, and homemaking.

Jill B. Fatzner, professor of curriculum and instruction in the College of Education at the University of New Orleans, is this year's recipient of the Louisiana Library Association's Academic Section Outstanding Academic Librarian of the Year Award. She has been instrumental in developing cooperative ventures that have brought library resources and services to Louisiana's academic community; she was principal investigator of a grant from the Louisiana Board of Regents for enhancing access to government publications; and she was responsible for obtaining the first successful directed federal appropriation for an academic library project. Fatzner has served on the Board of Directors of ACRL, the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant College's Commission on Information Technology, as chair of the Louisiana Academic Library Information Network Consortium, as a member of the Louisiana Library Network Commission, and the Louisiana Board of Regents' Task Force on Libraries.

Mary Pagliero Popp, public services librarian in the Information Technology Services department at Indiana University (IU) Bloomington Libraries, has been named the recipient of the William Evans Jenkins Librarian Award for 2001. Given in recognition of truly outstanding contributions to the Indiana University Libraries or to the library profession, the Jenkins Award honors the leadership of the first Chief Librarian at Indiana University, who served 1904–1921. Popp has held several other positions within the libraries over the last 28 years, including head of the Bibliographic Instruction Department and head of Undergraduate Library Services. She has been a major force in the planning and implementation of technological changes throughout the IU library system. She has served on numerous committees at the local, state, and national level. She is an active member of the Bloomington Faculty Council, the University Faculty Council, and the Bloomington Campus Calendar and Schedule Committee. Twice she has been elected to serve as the president of the Indiana University Librarians Association. Popp is a regular speaker at national conferences of the ALA and ACRL. She contributes a regular column on information literacy, "Check These Out," in Library Instruction Roundtable News.

Retirements

Werner Gundersheimer, Folger Shakespeare Library director, will retire in June 2002. Gundersheimer has served as director since 1984 and is the fourth director in the Folger's 70-year history. Under Gundersheimer's leadership, the Folger has enjoyed unprecedented growth, from exhibitions to programs, from the collections to the physical plant, from institutional financial stability to the commitment of the governing board. The endowment alone has increased more than 643% in market value, from $27 million in 1984 to more than $175 million in 2000, much of it in new gifts. During Gundersheimer's tenure, the Folger's landmark building has been significantly overhauled, with improved exhibition, performance, and research facilities. While the Folger remains primarily an environment of print and performance, Gundersheimer has ushered in technological improvements to expand accessibility and worldwide use of the collection by scholars and Shakespeare lovers alike. Before joining the Folger, he was chairman of the Department of History and director of the Center for Italian Studies at the University of Pennsylvania. A noted scholar in early modern French and Italian history, Gundersheimer is author of numerous books and articles.

Barbara G. Richards, associate university librarian at Carnegie Mellon University, has retired after 23 years of service. She came to Carnegie Mellon in 1978 as assistant librarian in the Mellon Institute Library. In 1981, she became acquisitions librarian and assistant head of Technical Processes, and in 1985 she became assistant director of Technical Services. In 1990, she was appointed associate director of libraries, followed by associate university librarian for administration/information and education services in 1992. Richards also acted as interim director from 1991–92. She served on the board of trustees for the Pittsburgh Regional Library Center from 1992 until its merger with PALINET in 1995, and continued to serve on the PALINET board until retirement. Her professional memberships include the ALA, ACRL, Pennsylvania Library Association, Special Libraries Association, American Society for Information Science, and Technology and the Society for Scholarly Publishing. She has written and lectured extensively about the digital library.

Deaths

Fleming Bennett, 90, librarian emeritus at the University of Florida, died May 3, 2001, after a brief illness. Bennett was associate director of libraries at the time of his retirement in 1976. He had previously served as head librarian at the University of Arizona (1952–64); head of acquisitions at the Columbia University Libraries (1950–52); and chief audiovisual librarian at West Virginia University. He had several research papers published in library journals. Bennett served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He was an elected member of Alpha Psi Omega, honorary dramatics fraternity, and Sigma Xi, national honorary scientific research society.

Ruth Ann Marshall, 81, former head of library technical processes at Carnegie Mellon University, died on April 6, 2001. Marshall was the head of the technical processes department of Carnegie Mellon University Libraries from 1947 until her retirement in 1985. During that time she saw the library outgrow its small facility on the third floor of a classroom building and expand into a new building, Hunt Library, and she witnessed the development of additional science library facilities at Carnegie Mellon. ■
