ences information profession. Anderson, past president of MLA and the Association of Academic Health Sciences Libraries, has served on the National Library of Medicine's Planning Panel on Education and Training of Health Sciences Librarians and MLA's Task Force on

Knowledge and Skills, which produced the Platform for Change, MLA's education policy statement. Her research focusing on the status of women in administrative roles in health sciences libraries helped facilitate changes in how health sciences library directors were recruited. Anderson served as coprincipal investigator for Columbia University's Integrated Advanced Information Management Systems project and she helped develop the Arizona Health Information Network.

Colleen Cook, executive associate dean of libraries at Texas A&M University, will hold the John L. and Mary T. Wright Endowed Library Professorship. The Wright Trust, an unrestricted endowment, was created in 1992 by John Wright, Class of '25, and his wife Mary. This is the fourth in a series of professorships for the library faculty, three of which were created this year. Cook is the author or coauthor of more than 30 articles on library services and resources. She serves as coprincipal investigator on "Service Effectiveness in Academic Research Libraries," a project funded by a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE). Cook received the Association of Former Students Distinguished Achievement Award in 1992 and was coauthor of a paper that received the Outstanding Conference Paper Award from the Southwest Educational Research Association in January 2000.

Berna Heyman, associate dean for academic services and automation at the College of William & Mary's Swem Library, was honored with the third annual Irwin McGraw-Hill Innovation in Entrepreneurship Pedagogy Award from the Entrepreneurship Division of the Academy of Management. Heyman won the award with Professor of Psychology Kelly Shaver for the Psychology Department's Psychology of Entrepreneurship course, a course that examines the people who create entrepreneurial organizations and the elements of the process that contribute to venture success. The course's delivery system is primarily Web-based and was developed in partnership with William & Mary's Swem Library to provide the most current resources available. Shaver and Heyman developed the course resources and entered their submission in the competition without using a single piece of paper.

Denise Troll, assistant university librarian for library information technology at Carnegie Mellon Libraries, has been named a Digital Library Federation (DLF) distinguished fellow. She will spearhead the part of DLF's program that aims to identify and evaluate measure that are appropriate for assessing the use and effectiveness of digital library collections and services. Troll is the third fellow the Council on Library and Information Resources and DLF have appointed since the program was established in May 2000.

Retirements

Glenn Offermann, head librarian and director of library services for Concordia University in St. Paul, Minnesota, retired after 33 years of service. During his tenure as director of library services, Offermann helped the institution adopt a host of advancements to transform Concordia's library into a technological resource center. As a founding member of the Cooperating Libraries in Consortium (CLIC) in 1969, Offermann was closely involved in that organization's development and has served on the Board of Directors since its inception. In addition to his duties as director of library services, Offerman has been the Concordia University archivist since 1971, a role he has continued since his retirement. He also served on the Faculty Senate and numerous university committees. In 1982, he completed the book Missouri in Minnesota: A Centennial History of the Minnesota South District-The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod (1882-1982), which traces the historical development of the district. Offerman has been a member of numerous professional and academic associations, including ALA, Minnesota Library Association, Lutheran Education Association, Concordia Historical Institute-St. Louis, Missouri, Committee on Historical Studies and Resources, CHI Quarterly Editorial Committee, and the J.J. Hill Reference Library Board of Trustees.

Deaths

Kuang-yao Fan, 66, retired curator of the University of Maryland (UM), College Park, Libraries' East Asia Collection, died October 9, after a lengthy illness. Fan played a key role in building up the Chinese-language monograph and serial holdings. After working at the Washington, D.C. Public Library as a reference librarian and cataloger, Fan joined the UM Libraries in 1969 as a Japanese language cataloger. Because of his bilingual ability, he was selected to catalog the Chinese collection as the Libraries began to acquire more Chinese materials to serve the needs of the growing campus community and the many Chinese-speaking residents in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. During his career, Fan also provided Chinese-language reference assistance and served as a bibliographer. He retired from UM in September 1998 after having served all of his nearly 30 years on campus with the East Asia Collection, which he headed both as curator and acting curator. Fan was a member of the Association of Asian Studies and the Chinese Librarians Association. ■

Kuang-yao Fan
