Profiles

JOSEPH BARNES has joined Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, West Virginia, as its new college librarian, the unit director for the Ruth Scarborough Library. Previously an assistant librarian at the University of Buffalo, Barnes has a Ph.D. in history and a master's degree in library science, both from the University of Buffalo. He did his undergraduate work at the University of Rochester in New York.

Prior to working for the University of Buffalo Library, Barnes was the city historian of Rochester, a department head with a rank similar to that of public library associate director. There he conducted a program of research, writing, and education in all aspects of local history and edited the quarterly journal, Rochester History. His teaching background includes experience as a history instructor at the University of Buffalo and the Rochester Institute of Technology and as a teacher in the Greece (New York) Central School District.

Barnes was president of the Genesee Country Historical Federation (1977-84), a trustee of the Public Works Historical Society (1977-78), executive secretary of the Bicentennial Commission of Rochester-Monroe County (1974-76), a member of the City Archives Commission for Rochester (1977-79), a member of the New City Hall Committee in Rochester (1978-83), and has been a trustee of the Friends of Mt. Hope Cemetery in Rochester since 1981 when he assisted in the establishment of this group which has raised substantial funds in grants and private donations.

Currently he holds memberships in the American Library Association (Association of College and Research Libraries), in the Society of American Archivists, and in Beta Phi Mu (International Library Honor Society).

SCOTT BENNETT, previously assistant university librarian for collection management at Northwestern University, has been named director of the Milton S. Eisenhower Library at the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland. An expert in collection development and a former English professor, Bennett will manage a collection of more than 2 million books, 13,000 serials, and 1.4 million microforms housed at the Eisenhower Library and the Hutzler Undergraduate Library on the University's Homewood campus, the George Peabody Library in downtown Baltimore, and the John Work Garrett Library at Evergreen House in North Baltimore.

Bennett is the author and editor of more than 20 essays, articles, and books on bibliographic methods, collection management and development, and Victorian literature. He also has been active in various professional organizations, including the American Association of University Professors, the Research Society for Victorian Periodicals, and the Library Administration and Management Association. He recently chaired a major collaborative research project of the Research Libraries Group, and took part in an effort to preserve library materials through collaborative action sponsored by the Committee on Institutional Cooperation.

Bennett earned a bachelor's degree from Oberlin College, master's and Ph.D. degrees in English from Indiana University, and an MLS degree from the University of Illinois. From 1967 until 1974, he was assistant professor of English at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he subsequently became a professor of library administration. He moved to Northwestern University in 1981.

HIRAM LOGAN DAVIS, dean of university libraries at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces, has been named the new director of libraries at Michigan State University, East Lansing. Davis, who was also appointed professor in the Department of Educational Administration, succeeds Dr. Richard E. Chapin, who directed the MSU libraries for the past 30 years. Since 1891, only three individuals have held the title of director of MSU libraries. Davis is the fourth.

Prior to his being named dean of university libraries at New Mexico State in 1987, Davis held a similar position for seven years at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, California. At both institutions he was instrumental in initiating and implementing new library building and renovation projects and establishing new programs and services that included automation.

A native of St. Joseph, Missouri, Davis holds a bachelor's degree in economics and English from Missouri Valley College in Marshall; an MLS from Emporia State University in Kansas; and a Ph.D. in administration and higher education and library science from the University of Michigan. He has also held positions with libraries at the University of California at Los Angeles, the University of Oklahoma, Kalamazoo Valley Community College in Michigan, Muskingum College in New Concord, Ohio, and the University of Kansas. While at the University of Michigan from 1972-73, he developed and directed the Library Science Doctoral Program for the Committee on Institutional Cooperation, a project involving six universities with library science doctoral programs: Chicago, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

CHARLING C. FAGAN has been appointed director of the Esther Raushenbush Library at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, New York. She will replace Rose Anne Burstein, library director since 1974, who retired at the end of June.

Fagan has been affiliated with the Columbia University library system since 1974. Currently acting director for the Academic Information Services Group, she was assistant director for Social Sciences from 1983 to 1987. Prior to that, she was head of the Access Services Department, Humanities and History Division. While working at Columbia, Fagan served on several of the University's boards and committees, including the board of directors of the Columbia University Association (1982-86), the University Panel on Sexual Harassment (1985 to present), and the President's Advisory Committee on the Handicapped (1987 to present).

Fagan also serves on the China Library Program Subcommittee of the United Board for Christian Higher Education in Asia, and was a consultant at Jiao Tung University in Shanghai.

Fagan received her bachelor's degree from Ohio Wesleyan University, and her MLS degree from Case Western Reserve University.

GEORGE R. GAUMOND, formerly college librarian at Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, West Virginia, is now director of the library at Valdosta State College, Georgia. Gaumond received his bachelor's degree in history from the University of South Carolina in 1969. Following several tours of duty as an officer in the U. S. Navy (1969-1974), Gaumond earned his MLS from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (1975), and recently completed his Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (1988). Prior to joining Shepherd College, Gaumond was assistant reader services librarian at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. He has been active in both state and regional library associations, as well as serving on several state committees in higher education.

ELIZABETH ANN LANGE has been named director of the Winona State University Library, Minnesota. Lange comes to Winona from the University of South Carolina where she has been assistant director of libraries for technical services since 1979. Prior to that time she served as head of the catalog division for university libraries at the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis from 1972–1979, and in the same capacity at Iowa State University from 1968–1972.

While at USC, she edited Reflections, the Thomas Cooper Library newsletter, wrote and managed several grants, including those which resulted in the design and implementation of the online catalog for the Fox Movietone news collection, served as guest lecturer for the College of Library and Information Science, chaired or served on numerous library-related committees including statewide automation and networking committees, the South Carolina newspaper project advisory board, and the South Carolina Federal Relations Committee for the Second Congressional District. In addition she has been listed in Who's Who in Library and Information Services, Directory of Library and Information Professionals, and in Who's Who of American Women.

Lange has a bachelor's degree from Northern State College and a master's in library science from the University of Minnesota.

ROBERT MARX, former director of the theatre program at the National Endowment for the Arts, has been named chief of the Performing Arts Research Center (PARC) of the New York Public Library at Lincoln Center. As chief, Marx will oversee the four research collections of dance, music, recorded sound, and theatre that constitute PARC, one of the world's preeminent performing arts libraries. In addition, he will serve as planning consultant for a major two-year study of the entire NYPL at Lincoln Center, directing a plan for the redevelopment of both PARC and its companion facility, the General Library and Museum of the Performing Arts. The study will focus on the Library's public programming, audience outreach, administrative organization, and financial structure.

Prior to his joining the National Endowment for the Arts in 1986, Marx was director of the theatre program at the New York State Council on the Arts. Particularly interested in international exchange, he was one of the producers who developed foreign and U.S. theatre presentations for the 1984 Olympics Arts Festival in Los Angeles. Subsequently, he planned the American engagements of theatre companies from Europe, Japan, and the Soviet Union. In 1987, he helped found the American-Soviet Theatre Initiative, which has established a program of theatrical exchange between the two countries. Marx's work in the theatre has included serving as artistic associate of the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles, and as co-producer with the Music-Theatre Group/Lenox Arts Center in New York. He has also been a consultant to such organizations as the Theatre Development Fund, Theatre Communications Group, and the Rockefeller Foundation, and is a widely published essayist on contemporary theatre and opera. Among other associations, he is editor of Opera News.

Born and raised in the Bronx, Marx graduated from New York University in 1972, and received his master's and doctorate degrees in dramatic literature from the Yale School of Drama. He has been a visiting lecturer in drama at Yale and in music at NYU.

EMILY R. MOBLEY, acting director of Purdue University Libraries, West Lafayette, Indiana, has been named the first dean of libraries at Purdue. Mobley was also promoted to professor of library science. She was appointed to the Purdue Libraries faculty in 1986 as the associate director of libraries and associate professor of library science. Mobley served in that capacity until last February, when she assumed the responsibilities of acting director after the death of director Joseph M. Dagnese.

Prior to coming to Purdue, Mobley was library director at GMI Engineering and Management Institute in Flint, Michigan. Her other positions included supervisor of reading services at General Motors Research Laboratories in Warren, Michigan; science librarian at Wayne State University in Detroit; and engineering librarian at Chrysler Corp. in Highland Park, Michigan. She has also been an adjunct lecturer at the University of Michigan School of Information and Library Studies in Ann Arbor, Michigan, where she taught courses in administration. Mobley was appointed by the governor of Michigan to serve on the Library of Michigan Board of Trustees, and she was vice-chair of the board when she resigned to take the position at Purdue.

Mobley is actively involved in professional activities and organizations on the state, national, and international levels. She has held many offices and positions in the Special Libraries Association at the state and national levels, culminating in the presidency of the Special Libraries Association from 1987–88. She was recently appointed as its representative to the International Federation of Library Associations. As a member of the American Library Association, she also serves on the Office for Library Outreach Services Minority Internship Committee, and the Association of College and Research Libraries Task Force on Library School Curriculum. Other professional activities include membership on the Library of Congress National Advisory Committee. She has been a consultant in the areas of special libraries and sci-tech collection evaluation and development, and she was a member of the Directors Selection Committee for the Smithsonian Institution. Pierien Press recently appointed her to its Reference Services Review Editorial Board.

Mobley has written extensively on leadership in the library profession and she has given many presentations on libraries and leadership throughout the United States. Her most recent publication, "Women and Minorities as Leaders," appears in Leadership in the Library/Information Profession (edited by Alice Gertzog, McFarland, 1989).

Mobley received her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Michigan and is a doctoral candidate there. Her alma mater honored her earlier this year with its Distinguished Alumnus Award in the School of Information and Library Studies.

JAMES G. NEAL has been appointed dean of the Indiana University Libraries, Bloomington. Neal had been assistant dean and head of the Reference and Instructional Services Division at the Pennsylvania State University Libraries since 1983. He succeeds Elaine Sloan, who left Indiana in August 1988 to head the Columbia University Libraries.

At Penn State he was responsible for the public service and collection development programs of the main campus libraries, the administration and development of library faculty and staff, the implementation and evaluation of automated services including the Penn State Library Information Access System, and the direction of personnel and facilities operations. Previous to his appointment at Penn State, Neal was assistant director for Memorial Library Public Services at the University of Notre Dame and a Council on Library Resources Academic Library Management intern.

Neal received a bachelor of arts degree in Russian studies in 1969 from Rutgers University. In 1972 he received a master of arts degree in history from Columbia University and in 1973 he received a master's degree in library science from Columbia. He also holds a Certificate in Advanced Librarianship from Columbia.

Neal has been very active in professional organizations at the state and national levels. He has served on the Pennsylvania Governor's Advisory Council on Library Development. Nationally, Neal has been particularly involved in the American Library Association's Library Administration and Management Association and he is presently on its Board of Directors.

Neal is the author of many articles in scholarly and professional publications and has given many conference presentations in the areas of library personnel issues, library automation, and library history.

MAUREEN PASTINE has been named director of Central University Libraries at Southern Methodist University, Dallas. Pastine has been director of libraries at Washington State University since 1985; prior to that appointment she served as university librarian at San Jose State University for five years. She has numerous publications, with emphasis on integrating library use instruction into the general education curriculum, bibliographic instruction, library automation, and women's studies. She is active in many units of the American Library Association and has served on committees and task forces in the Association of College and Research Libraries and the Library Administration and Management Association. She is also an active participant in state and international professional associations. Pastine was named the Miriam Dudley Bibliographic Instruction Librarian of the Year and received the award on June 25, 1989, during the ALA Annual Conference in Dallas.

WILLIAM GRAY POTTER has been appointed director of libraries at the University of Georgia, Athens. Potter, formerly associate dean of libraries for technical services, automation, and systems at Arizona State University, assumed his new position on August 1, 1989.

Since 1984, Potter has served as editor of Information Technology and Libraries, the quarterly journal of the Library and Information Technology Association (LITA), a division of the American Library Association. He was president of LITA during 1987-88 and is presently chair of the association's publications committee. Potter has also been contributing editor of a newsletter associated with the Journal of Academic Librarianship and, in 1981, edited the Library Trends issue focusing on "Bibliometrics." He is the author of numerous publications, many of which emphasize the use of advanced technology to improve and expand library services.

Potter earned his doctorate, master's in library science, and master's in English at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He also has studied statistics, mathematics, systems analysis, data processing, and computer programming. He earned his bachelor's degree in English in 1973 at Southern Illinois University.

Potter joined Arizona State in August 1985. Prior to his position in Arizona, he held positions in the libraries at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign from 1978 to 1985 and the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, from 1975 to 1978.

HERBERT D. SAFFORD, director of library services at Kutztown University since 1985, has been appointed director of the Donald O. Rod Library at the University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls. Safford received a bachelor's degree from the University of Vermont, a master's degree in philosophy from Yale University, and master's and doctoral degrees in library science from Columbia University. Prior to becoming director of library services at Kutztown, Safford served as associate director at Bowie State College in Maryland and director at Muskingum College in Ohio. He has been active in library and higher education organizations in Ohio and Pennsylvania and has had material published in a number of sources.

RAVINDRA N. SHARMA has been named director of libraries at the University of Evansville, Indiana. Prior to his recent appointment he was an associate professor and assistant director for public services and collection development at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh. From 1981 to 1985 Sharma was head librarian at Pennsylvania State University-Beaver Campus, Monaca, where he was responsible for the administration, budgeting, planning, and personnel of the library. He was a reference librarian at Colgate University, Hamilton, New York, from 1971 to 1981, with a leave of absence for two years beginning in 1978 to work on his Ph.D. He was an assistant professor of library science and assistant librarian for one year at College of the Ozarks in Clarksville, Arkansas, and a staff librarian from 1968 to 1970 at North Texas State University, Denton.

Among the many fellowships and grants he has received are a U.S. Department of Education Title II-B grant in 1988, an NEH/ACRL/ALA grant for humanities programming in 1982, and four Colgate Humanities Faculty Development Grants between 1974 and 1981.

Sharma has served on many committees throughout his career including the ACRL Research Committee (1989-91), the Asian Section of ACRL (1985-88), the Conference Planning Committee for the Wisconsin Association of Academic Libraries (1985-86), and the Executive Committee and area chairperson for South Asia of the International Relations Round Table of the American Library Association (1983- ). Honors include the Rider award from the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh (1988) and membership on the Dean's Advisory Council, School of Library and Information Science, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee (1987-).

Sharma has written many articles, book reviews, editorials, and books. A sports journalist since 1963, Sharma covered the 1976 Olympics for Indian newspapers. His published articles in the field of librarianship include: "S.R. Ranganathan: The Crusader" in Libri: International Review; "University Reforms in India: Problems and Solutions" in The Educational Review; "Library Instruction: An Opinion" in The Journal of Academic Librarianship; and "India, Academic Libraries In" in Encyclopedia of Library and Information Science. Books include: Indian Librarianship: Perspectives and Prospects and Indian Academic Libraries and Dr. S.R. Ranganathan: A Critical Study. At the most recent conference of the Asian-Pacific American Librarians Association at the Dallas Public Library, June 1989, Sharma gave a talk entitled "Making It in America: The Asian-American Experience."

Sharma received his bachelor's degree with honors and a master's in history from the University of Delhi, India, in 1963 and 1966 respectively; an MLS from North Texas State University, Denton, in 1970; and a Ph.D. in information and library studies and higher education from State University of New York at Buffalo in 1982.

ARTHUR PRICE YOUNG has been appointed dean of libraries at the University of South Carolina, Columbia. When he takes on the new job in October, Young will supervise the Thomas Cooper Library and its affiliated collections.

He currently serves as dean of the University of Rhode Island Library, where his responsibilities include the audiovisual center, marine science library, and the College of Continuing Education's library. Young worked as assistant dean for public services at the University of Alabama Library from 1976-81 and as an associate professor in Alabama's Graduate School of Library Science from 1978-81. He also has been an instructor in Syracuse University's School of Library Science and was head of reader services with the State University of New York's College at Cortland. While completing his Ph.D. in library science at the University of Illinois, Young served as a research associate at the university's Library Research Center. He holds master's degrees from Syracuse University and the University of Massachusetts. His undergraduate degree is from Tufts University.

Young has published several books and dozens of articles and bibliographies on topics ranging from the history of libraries to scholarship methods.

He is a member of the Association of College and Research Libraries, the New England Library Association, and several other organizations. He holds membership in Phi Kappa Phi and Beta Phi Mu. Young is also a reviewer for the National Endowment for the Humanities and serves on the executive board of the Library History Round Table of the American Library Association.

People in the news

ROLAND M. BAUMANN, an archivist adjunct professor of history at Oberlin College, Ohio, and a leading authority on administering access to confidential government records, is one of only two U.S. archivists invited to examine archives in the U.S.S.R. this fall through the terms of a new protocol with the Soviet Union that also inaugurates cooperation between the two countries in genealogical research. Joining Baumann will be Marie Allen, deputy director of the National Archives' Intergovernmental Records Project. In the first two weeks of October they will visit archives in Moscow, Leningrad, and Riga to become familiar with techniques of appraisal, selection, and acquisition in the Soviet Union's government archives. A Soviet archivist and historian are expected to visit the U.S. in October 1990.

Formerly chief of the Division of Archives and Manuscripts at the Pennsylvania Museum Commission, Baumann frequently serves as an archival consultant, and he is the author of numerous professional articles, including a 1986 article in the American Archivist urging a model law for administering access to confidential records in government archives. The article grew out of his participation in the Research Fellowship Program for Study of Modern Archives funded in 1985 by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and the Earhart Foundation of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

The Soviet visit is an activity of the newly created U.S.-U.S.S.R. Commission on Archival Cooperation (CAC) of the American Council of Learned Societies and the Main Archival Administration of the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers; CAC is administered in the U.S. by IREX. United States Archivist Don W. Wilson and Fedor M. Baganov, chief of the Main Archival Administration of the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers, signed a joint agreement of archival cooperation for 1989-90 at an April 18 ceremony in the U.S.S.R. The CAC is designed to promote professional development and cooperation between the two countries while increasing access for all researchers to all materials held in archives. While in the U.S.S.R., Wilson returned to the Soviet government the first two boxes of the original files of the Imperial Russian consulates in North America. The remainder of the 400 boxes will be returned to the U.S.S.R. in the course of the year.

DIANE GARNER, head of the Documents and Maps Section at Pattee Library, Pennsylvania State University, was named as the fifth recipient of Government Publications Review's Bernard M. Fry Award. Garner's prize-winning article, "The Information Policy of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development," appeared in University of Nevada Libraries' Government Publications Review, vol. 15 (September/October 1988):421-37. The recipient of the award is selected by an independent review board for the best article appearing in Government Publications Review during the preceding year. The award is named in honor of the founding editor. This year's winner received a plaque and a check in the amount of $500 presented by Pergamon Press, Inc.

ELLEN GIBSON, director of the Law Library at SUNY-Buffalo, is the 1989 recipient of the Joseph L. Andrews Bibliographical Award for her book, New York Legal Research Guide. The Andrews Award is given annually by the American Association of Law Libraries to recognize the year's significant printed contributions to legal bibliography. The award, a plaque, was presented at the AALL annual meeting in June.

NORMAN HORROCKS, vice-president for editorial of Scarecrow Press, has been elected vice-president/president-elect of Beta Phi Mu, the library science honor society. Founded at the University of Illinois in 1948, Beta Phi Mu now has over 25,000 members who are honors graduates of accredited library science programs in the United States, Canada, and Europe. Its headquarters are at the University of Pittsburgh and there are close to 50 chapters in the U.S. and in Europe. Beta Phi Mu provides scholarships and awards in support of library science education and furthers research through an awards and publications program.

Horrocks has also received the Association for Library and Information Science Education's annual Service Award. The formal presentation will be made at its annual meeting in Chicago in January 1990. Horrocks has served as the Association's president, secretary-treasurer, journal editor, parliamentarian, and chair of several of its committees since he joined the Association in 1964. Before joining Scarecrow Press in 1986 Horrocks had worked in libraries in England, Cyprus, and Australia. He had taught at schools in Perth, Western Australia, the University of Pittsburgh, University of Hawaii, Dalhousie University, Nova Scotia, Canada, and lectured at the National Taiwan University and the University of the West Indies. Currently he is an adjunct professor at the Rutgers University School of Communication, Information and Library Studies.

ROBERT P. HOLLEY, associate dean of libraries at Wayne State University, has been named editor of Resource Sharing and Information Networks. This journal, published by Haworth Press since 1981, provides a forum for ideas on the basic theoretical and practical problems faced by planners, practitioners, and users of networks of all types.

NEAL K. KASKE has been appointed as a senior associate with the Library Development Staff in the Office for Educational Research and Improvement. He joined the Department from the University of Alabama, where he was a member of the faculty at the Graduate School of Library Service. In his new position, Kaske will administer the College Library Technology and Cooperation Grant Program which was authorized in 1987 (Title II-D of the Higher Education Act, as amended). With an annual appropriation of approximately $3.6 million, this program provides support for a variety of activities related to library networking and resource sharing involving institutions of higher education and non-academic libraries of all types. The program also has a research and demonstration component to enable researchers to study problems and test ideas.

JACK LEISTER, head librarian of the Institute of Governmental Studies Library, University of California, Berkeley, has been selected to receive an Award for Professional Achievement by the San Francisco Bay Region Chapter of the Special Libraries Association. The award is given to a Chapter member for notable and enduring contributions to the Chapter and the profession. The award represents a cumulative evaluation of an individual's career and emphasizes local activity and leadership of an exemplary nature. Leister has served as Chapter president, treasurer, member of the Board of Directors, and on numerous committees. At the association level Leister has served as a member of the Board of Directors, conference program chair for the Honolulu conference in 1979, and as a member of several committees. In 1987 Leister was selected one of the fifteen original Fellows of the Association.

RUTH J. PERSON, associate vice-chancellor for academic affairs, University of Missouri, St. Louis, was recently elected to a three-year term on the Board of Directors of the American Association of University Administrators. Chartered in Buffalo, New York, in 1970 as a non-profit educational organization, AAUA represents the professional standard in post-secondary administration, open to career administrators in accredited colleges, universities, and other post-secondary institutions. Major priorities include leadership development, standards, and ethics.

Retirements

GEORGE M. BAILEY, associate director of libraries for the Claremont Colleges in Claremont, California, retired on June 30, 1989. His active professional career of 42 years started with his teaching history at Franklin and Marshall College, Heidelberg College (Tiffin, Ohio), and the University of Wisconsin. After receiving his library degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1953, he filled a series of progressively more demanding library positions at the Berkeley and Davis campuses of the University of California, Northwestern University, York College (City University of New York), and, since 1971, at the Claremont Colleges. Bailey has contributed much to the nation's library associations including: service on numerous ALA committees and divisions and the ALA Council; presidency of Beta Phi Mu; and active participation in state associations in California, Illinois, and New York. He made major contributions to ACRL through its sections and committees and from 1963 to 1968 he was ACRL executive secretary. As a site visitor for the Western Association of Schools and Colleges and ALA's Committee on Accreditation, he has helped to ensure the quality of our colleges, universities, and library schools. Bailey will continue to pursue his professional responsibilities in ALA, serving on the Committee on Accreditation.

George M. Bailey

HERBERT CAHOON, Robert H. Taylor Curator of Autograph Manuscripts at the Pierpont Morgan

Library, New York City, retired on June 30 after 35 years of service. Cahoon received an AB from Harvard College in 1940 and an SBLS from Columbia University School of Library Service in 1943. He was formerly on the staff of the Harvard College Library and the Reserve Division of the New York Public Library. In May he was elected an Honorary Fellow of the Morgan Library. He is the author of Thanatopsis, 1949, co-author of A Bibliography of James Joyce, 1953, The Overbrook Press Bibliography, 1963, and many exhibition catalogs and articles.

ELAINE FITZMAURICE, head of the copy cataloging and catalog maintenance area, retired this past spring after 48 years of service to the Harvard Law School Library.

JOHN E. GALEJS, assistant director for collection development at Iowa State University, Ames, retired at the end of June after 31 years of service. Galejs received his bachelor's degree and two masters' degrees from the University of Minnesota. In 1958, Galejs came to Iowa State as serials librarian, became head of the serials department in 1962, and served in several assistant director posts, being named assistant director for collection development in 1983. He belongs to several professional organizations including ALA and Iowa Library Association. In ALA he has been particularly active in the Resources and Technical Services Division having served on several committees including the Library Materials Price Index Committee, Planning Committee, Policy and Research Committee of the Serials Section, and Acquisitions Section Nominating Committee.

ELEANOR ADAMS GUSTAFSON retired on June 30 after nine years as librarian of Wellesley College. A 1946 graduate of Simmons College, Gustafson received her MLS in 1964 from Columbia University School of Library Service. After two years at Bryn Mawr College Library, Gustafson came to Wellesley where she served as cataloger, senior cataloger, associate librarian for technical services, and associate college librarian. A career spanning 41 years at Wellesley.

Eleanor Gustafson

She actively participated in the 1956 and 1975 renovations projects for the Clapp Library, planned and trained personnel for the online cataloging system in 1973, supervised planning and installation of the Innovative Interfaces Library System. In 1984, serving as co-chair with an alumna, Gustafson helped revive a Friends of the Library for the College. The Friends is now an active group with nearly 1,000 members. Gustafson was on the Board of Directors of the Boston Consortium, served as chair 1983–84, and was on the Board of Directors of NELINET 1981–83. During her earlier career she was active in the Resources and Technical Services Division of ALA and the New England Technical Services Librarians.

ANNELISE KATZ, librarian of the Psychology Research Library and the Social Relations/Sociology Library, retired on June 30 after 41 years of service at Harvard.

Originally from Germany, Katz had to leave that country in 1934 when she was 12 years old, spending the next 14 years in Italy and England. She came to Harvard in 1948 as department secretary for the Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures. In 1959, she became the librarian of the Psychology Library, taking on the added responsibilities of librarian of the Social Relations/Sociology Library in the summer of 1980. Katz was responsible for directing the administration of these two libraries including the acquisition and processing of books and journals, the training and supervision of part-time student assistants, and the preparation and administration of the libraries' budgets and accounts.

JUNE ROSSIER retired in July after serving as the Harvard Law School Library's selector for foreign and international law for the past 22 years.

NANETTE SARGENT, music cataloger, retired in May from Texas Tech University Libraries, Lubbock.

BEA SPRIGGS, cataloger at the Bowling Green State University Libraries, Ohio, for 23 years, retired in December 1988.

GLADYS TAYLOR, archivist of Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, New York, and member of the staff of Wallace Memorial Library, retired June 30, after 30 years of service. Taylor, who previously held positions of acting director and head of reference, established the archives of RIT. Items and records spanning 160 years and three campuses (including the now dissolved Eisenhower College) have been carefully preserved and await new quarters in the Wallace Memorial Library facility under construction for expansion and renovation. She has been a member of the American Library Association, the Society of American Archivists, the New York Library Association, the National Archives Associates, and the National Association of the Deaf. She has served on the local Rochester Regional Library Council Preservation Committee and Local History Committee.

ELIZABETH M. TESTA, librarian of the California Postsecondary Education Commission, has announced her retirement on August 31. Before joining the Commission, where she established the higher education research library in 1975, she held positions as librarian of the National Film Board of Canada and head librarian of the Leslie Frost Library at York University, Toronto. She also served for two years as a consultant on academic libraries in East Africa.

JOHN BARRY VIGLE retired on June 30 as director of the Library and Learning Resources Center at the University of Maine at Presque Isle, a position he held since August 1982. Vigle began his career in 1956 as a branch assistant in the Brooklyn Public Library. In 1959 he switched to academic librarianship by moving to the University of Dayton Library. Vigle was appointed assistant director in 1964 and remained at Dayton until 1972, when he accepted his first directorship at Xavier University in Cincinnati. Vigle left Xavier in 1978 to accept a directorship at Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, Florida, from August 1978 to July 1982. Vigle's most significant contributions have been in the area of library consortia. In addition to active memberships in the University of Maine System Library Directors Group and the old Dayton-Miami Valley Consortium he was instrumental in the founding committee of the greater Cincinnati Library Consortium and was elected to serve as the consortium's second president in 1974. He was the chief founder of the Tampa Bay Library Consortium and was elected its first president in 1979.

MAUREEN WILSON, map librarian at the University of British Columbia Library, Vancouver, has retired after 30 years of service. Wilson obtained her bachelor's honors and diploma in librarianship at the University of London. After working at the Surrey County Library in England and the Public Library in North Bay, Ontario, Wilson came to UBC in 1959 as a general reference librarian. In 1965, she was appointed the first head of the newly formed Map Library.

Deaths

ALAN M. COHN, humanities librarian and English professor at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, died Saturday, July 15, in Jackson County Nursing Home at Murphysboro. He was 62.

Cohn organized the humanities division as one of Morris Library's five divisions in the 1950s and served as its original director. He built the humanities collection, as well as its archives of rare books, into a nationally known research resource. Cohn, an internationally recognized James Joyce scholar, also published scores of articles, reviews, bibliographic checklists and notes on Joyce. His work, described as indispensable to Joyce scholars, will be added to the SIUC library's special collections of Joyce materials. Cohn earned both bachelor's and master's degrees in English literature from Wash-

“You should evaluate your automation investment as if your future depended on it.”

Every day someone comes out with a new way to do this or a better way to do that. And the pace is getting faster all the time.

Libraries are no exception. When you automate, you have to be sure the system you buy today will be able to take advantage of all the innovations that will spring up tomorrow.

The changing environment.

Much of the change now focuses on or around the rapid exchange of information. Electronic mail, networking, gateways, data and video communications—all these are virtually waiting on your doorstep.

Software changes, too. Newer and better applications packages are constantly emerging—some to augment what you already have, some to replace them. One of the most exciting new developments involves relational data base management systems software. This sophisticated tool gives you freer, faster and more definitive access to your data base, with more effective and flexible management reports, collection development tools, and system security codes.

You'll be able to capitalize on hardware breakthroughs as they happen, too. So you can take advantage of the computer industry's rapid trend toward increased computing power at reduced cost.

Staying open to change.

Your library system needs to accommodate changes like these. Open systems provide the easiest way to do just that. They let you adapt to change economically and at your own speed.

So it pays to choose a vendor who continually examines and evaluates advances in technology. Who understands the usefulness of this technology and how to apply it in a way that's useful to you. And who has a history of providing flexible solutions for the complex, ever-changing world of library automation.

Find out more about what these innovations can mean to you. Write for our free Q&A booklet: CLSI, Inc., 320 Nevada Street, Newtonville, MA 02160, or call us at 1-800-365-0085.

ington University (where he was twice a Heermans Fellow). He earned his library science degree from the University of Illinois in 1955, coming to SIU as humanities librarian that same year. He was a member of the Bibliographic Society of America, the Charles Dickens Society, the Modern Language Association, the Phi Beta Kappa Association and an honorary member of Pi Kappa Delta. In 1966 he was one of the few librarians elected to membership in the Caxton Club, composed of collectors and others interested in book collections, fine printing, and literature. Cohn won an Amoco Outstanding Teacher Award for excellence in 1977.

ELIZABETH MUNTZ DUGOFF, a librarian at Florida Institute of Technology, died of a stroke on June 14, at Humana Hospital Sebastian. Dugoff moved to Brevard County 12 years ago from Norfolk, Connecticut. Born in New York City, she graduated from Hunter College there. She received her master's degree in library science from Columbia University and a second master's degree in English literature from Indiana University. Dugoff worked as a librarian at Hunter College and Western Connecticut State College before coming to Melbourne.

ELMER M. GRIEDER, former associate director of the Stanford University Libraries, died at his home June 19, of a heart attack. During his 26 years of service to the libraries, from 1949 to 1974, the collections grew from 1 million to 4 million volumes and were finally ranked among the top 10 universities in total holdings.

Grieder was born August 14, 1909, in Dubuque, Iowa. He graduated from the University of Dubuque, received a master's degree in history from Harvard and a degree in library service from Columbia.

Before coming to Stanford he worked at the New York and Detroit public libraries, was a Harvard University staff librarian for nine years and university librarian at West Virginia University for two years. He served as assistant director of the Stanford Libraries from 1949 to 1951, when he was promoted to associate director. In 1955 he took a leave of absence to travel to Turkey, where he served as director of the Institute of Librarianship at Ankara University on a special assignment from the American Library Association. He was responsible for the establishment of a training program for Turkish librarians. Shortly after his return to Stanford, Grieder was named acting director of the libraries, from 1959 to 1961. For the last 10 years of his Stanford career he concentrated on the development of a selection organization for the University Libraries and on collaboration in collection-building with the coordinate libraries at the Hoover Institution and the Law, Medical, Business, Food Research Institute, and Stanford Linear Accelerator Center Libraries.

DAVID LEWALLEN, business librarian at the University of California, Irvine, died in April. Lewallen received an AB with distinction from Indiana University graduating with departmental honors in 1969. He attended UCLA on a Chancellor's Fellowship and was a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship alternate. He received his MLS from Simmons College in Boston in 1974. From 1972 to 1979 he worked in the circulation, reference, and public services departments at Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Dewey Library. Before coming to UCI, Lewallen was manager of the Business Library, Alameda County Libraries, during his tenure there the library received citations from the U.S. Small Business Administration and the California Employment Development Department. A project the Library cosponsored was nominated for a County Supervisor's Association of California Public-Private Partnership Award in 1983.

During the past two years Lewallen was an active volunteer for the AIDS WALK Orange County, which helps raise funds for organizations engaged in direct patient services, education, and research related to AIDS.

ANNE M. MURPHY, director of libraries at Fordham University, died of cancer on May 17. She joined Fordham in 1954 as an assistant librarian and was appointed director in 1970. Previously, she worked for the New York Public Library. Murphy was a trustee of METRO at the time of her death. She was elected to the Board in 1983.

BARBARA REMMERDE died on March 15, 1989. She had been a librarian at Eastern Washington University from 1970 until her death. She retired in 1985, but continued to serve the University as a part-time librarian. She received her MLS in 1970 and was named by Governor Dixy Lee Ray to the Washington State Board of Certification for Librarians, serving two appointments.

GRETCHEN SCHENK, Washington State librarian from 1941 to 1945, passed away in Alabama on May 16, 1989.

W. H. O. SCOTT died on April 23, 1989. Bill Scott served the libraries at Western Washington State University from 1960 until his retirement in 1987, serving as circulation librarian, specials projects librarian, and government documents librarian.

EDNA MAY BROWN TITUS, retired from the Library of Congress in the mid-1960s, died on March 1. Titus was the head of the Serials Section in the Descriptive Cataloging Division from the early 1940s until 1959. She then became editor of the third edition of the Union List of Serials, a special project which was completed in 1965. Titus is remembered by her colleagues as a dedicated librarian who worked hard to increase the quality of the work in the Serials Section.

Here's the new Books in Print ad.

Thanks to Albert Simmonds and staff, you'll like what it says.

Every year I think "Here it comes again." The Books in Print announcement ad. Sure, it's a great product, every library and bookstore needs it, and it does have accurate information on almost a million current books. But, what is there new to say about a product that everybody already knows?

Well, this year Managing Editor Albert Simmonds and his staff have made my job a lot easier.

They've added a whole new volume to Books in Print—of O.P. and O.S.I. titles. So now you'll know for sure that a book is really out-of-print or out-of-stock indefinitely. If you need to order it, we even supply the names of O.P. dealers and search services.

Albert has also introduced all sorts of new features. Like index bars that help you find the section you want at the flip of a page. Asterisks that highlight every new book that's come out. And boldfaced, cross-referenced listings for publishers whose titles can also be found, with descriptions, in Bowker's Publishers Trade List Annual.

And have you ever wondered how Books in Print stays so accurate and complete year after year? Increased tape-to-tape updating (bringing data directly from publishers' computers to the database) makes this new edition's prices, ISBNs, and other vital data elements more reliable than ever.

Books in Print will be published in September, a month earlier than usual, which means you should place your order now.

The phone call is on us:

- (800) 521-8110
- In NY, AK, and HI, call collect 212-337-6934
- In Canada, call (800) 537-8416.

Or you can write: R.R. Bowker, P.O. Box 762, New York, NY 10011.

Another year, another Books in Print ad. But this year, it's certainly not just another Books in Print. Now the question is: what will Albert and his staff do for an encore?
