Information exchange on planning and evaluation

The LAMA/LOMS Planning and Evaluation of Library Services (PELS) Committee will sponsor an open meeting at the ALA Midwinter Conference to provide an opportunity for librarians interested in the planning and evaluation of library services to exchange ideas in an informal setting. Members of committees with a similar focus in other ALA divisions are particularly welcome to attend.

The Committee wants to hear from librarians who are interested in and knowledgeable about: various types of planning processes; existing methodologies for evaluation; ways of measuring library effectiveness; preparing the library staff for planning and evaluation activities.

The open meeting is scheduled for Sunday, January 19, from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. For more information, contact Meredith Butler, University Library 108, State University of New York at Albany, 1400 Washington Avenue, Albany, NY 12222; (518) 442-3565.

How a library at a small university makes information accessible in a big way.

“Many of our incoming students are apprehensive about using microforms, simply from lack of personal experience. So we established a library orientation program that includes a hands-on introduction to microforms. It calms the students’ initial apprehension and encourages them to use microforms as a source of information.”

Donald K. Tribit, Periodicals Librarian at Ganser Library, Millersville University of Pennsylvania, is a believer in serials management with microforms. The library’s serials in microform program, under his direction for 23 years, is set up for maximum student use. The microform area is self-service, with staff assistance available, so students have both the access and the support they need to become comfortable using microforms.

Don Tribit’s program has paid off. The 6,000 students at Millersville University, a multipurpose institution located near Lancaster in south-central Pennsylvania, see microforms as an integral part of their research. “Our students use microforms with the same frequency as paper issues of periodicals,” says Tribit. “Once they understand that with microforms we can offer much better access to information—a complete run of The New York Times, for instance—they treat microforms as a real advantage.”

Serials holdings at Ganser Library include 1,800 current subscriptions in microform. As the University expands and changes its focus to meet student needs, new titles in microform are added, with the faculty’s blessing.

“It’s important to refine our holdings continually,” Tribit explains. “Right now we’re looking at new titles to accommodate a growing emphasis on business and computer science.”

Over the years, Don Tribit and the Ganser Library staff have looked to University Microfilms International (UMI) for assistance in developing their serials program.

More than 1,500 of the library’s current periodical subscriptions in microform are supplied by UMI—and Tribit credits the quality of the subscription program with improving the accessibility of information to the library community.

Serials management with microforms is a success at Millersville University of Pennsylvania—and at hundreds of libraries in all kinds of institutions. Let UMI help make information more accessible in your library with a comprehensive serials in microform program. Call or write:

PUBLICATIONS

● Archives in Appalachia: A Directory provides descriptions of 181 repositories in south central Appalachia (North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, and West Virginia) that hold historical records documenting the political, social, cultural, and economic history of the region. Each entry has information on the type of material held, subject areas covered, geographical area, and the inclusive dates and size of the holdings. Also included are indexes by type of material and subject, a map showing the counties covered by the directory, and a list of agencies which do not currently collect manuscript materials but which plan to do so in the future. The directory was compiled by the Appalachian Consortium as part of a project funded by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. Copies are available for $2 from the Appalachian Consortium, University Hall, Appalachian State University, Boone, NC 28606.

● Associations in Action: The Washington, D.C. Higher Education Community, by Harland G. Bolland (116 pages, 1985), has been published as Report Number 2 of the ASHE-ERIC Higher Education Report series. The report analyzes the structure of the higher education associations in Washington and focuses primarily on the American Council on Education (ACE), the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU), the Association of American Universities (AAU), the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC), the Association of American Colleges (AAC), and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant

Colleges (NASULGC). Copies are available for $7.50 from the Association for the Study of Higher Education, One Dupont Circle, Suite 630, Washington, DC 20036. ISBN 0884-0040.

ASHE's Report Number 1 is Flexibility in Academic Staffing: Effective Policies and Practices, by Kenneth P. Mortimer, Marque Bagshaw, and Andrew T. Masland. The report describes a number of strategies that might be used to survive reallocations or reductions in personnel. The cost is the same as the report described above. ISBN 0-913317-20-9.

● Cataloging Microcomputer Files: A Manual of Interpretation for AACR2, by Sue A. Dodd and Ann M. Sandberg-Fox (296 pages, September 1985), describes elements of cataloging as they apply to software, identifies problems associated with describing software, and discusses the hardware and software components of a microcomputer system and their relevance to the catalog record. The final chapter includes 12 examples illustrating problems commonly encountered while cataloging software, with step-by-step instructions. A glossary included. The cost is $37.50.
