
Appointments

Stephen Enniss has been named Eric Weimann Librarian of the Folger Shakespeare Library. In addition to overseeing library operations and acquisitions, Enniss will lead digitization initiatives to expand access to rare materials in the Folger's collections. During his 15 years at Emory University's Manuscript, Archives, and Rare Book Library, Enniss has led the library in acquiring important papers of major American, British, and Irish writers—among them Ted Hughes, Salman Rushdie, Alice Walker, Seamus Heaney, and Flannery O'Connor. He is the co-author of the award-winning exhibition catalog "No Other Appetite": Sylvia Plath, Ted Hughes, and the Blood Jet of Poetry and has written for numerous publications including the Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America and RBM: Journal of Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Cultural Heritage. He is a frequent speaker on the value of research libraries, and he has been interviewed on NPR's "All Things Considered" and in the New York Times, the latter following Emory's acquisition of the 75,000 volume Raymond Danowski Poetry Library. Enniss is the recipient of a Leverhulme Visiting Fellowship from the University of London.

Retirements

Patricia L. Brill has retired from the library faculty of California State University-Fullerton, after nearly 37 years of service. Beginning her career as a reference librarian, Brill went on to become reference section coordinator. Subsequent positions included chair of public services; collection development officer; and, for 11 years, associate university librarian, during which time she oversaw the library's major building and expansion projects. In pre-retirement status for the last several years, Brill served as electronic collections librarian, leading the library's rapid development of electronic resources. Throughout her career, she participated in professional associations at the local, state, national, and international levels. Within ALA, Brill was most active in ACRL, including positions in the Instruction Section and as president of CARL, California's ACRL Chapter. She was elected chair of ALCTS Collection Management and Development Section and served on numerous ALCTS committees and boards. Brill participated in IFLA and was a member of its Acquisitions and Exchange Committee. In addition, she held a number of positions on professional editorial boards, including ten years on Research Strategies' board. Her activities as a library consultant involved projects in England, Mexico, and the United States that emphasized organizational communication and cooperative collection development, the latter being the primary focus of her academic research, publication, and presentation. As an adjunct instructor since 1990, Brill taught courses in library administration as well as collection management for the San Jose State University School of Library and Information Science.

Betty H. Day retired from the University of Maryland (UM) Libraries in July 2008, having spent her entire career as a librarian in various significant roles at UM. Day's career at UM progressed from service as a reference librarian to humanities reference librarian and bibliographer to the emerging field of electronic information resources, which she managed for 12 years for UM, the University System of Maryland and Affiliated Institutions Consortium, as well as the Maryland Digital Library. She achieved distinguished records of service and scholarly contribution in her two fields of study: American and English literature and women's studies, and electronic resource acquisition and management. Day chaired UM's Library Assembly (2007-08). Day is second in the UM library faculty rank to be awarded emirita status.

Bonnie Jo Dopp retired in January 2008 after 12 years with the University of Maryland's (UM) Music Library and subsequently the Michelle Smith Performing Arts Library. Dopp held positions at the San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and Montgomery County (Maryland) public libraries prior to joining UM. She managed Special Collections in the Performing Arts and then served as a music and ethnomusicology expert for the libraries. Dopp's career was highlighted with participation in several national associations, including the American Musicological Society, the Music Library Association, and ALA. Another career hallmark was the publication of numerous reviews of new books, recordings, videos, and multimedia materials in music and ethnomusicology. Day is the first in the UM library faculty ranks to be awarded emerita status.

Charles McNamara has retired as curator of rare books in the Wilson Special Collections Library at the University of North Carolina (UNC), a position he held since 1986. Before joining UNC, McNamara was associate rare books librarian and curator of the Arthur Dean Collections of French History and Literature at Cornell University Library (1978–86) and rare books cataloger and rare books librarian at the University of Rochester Libraries (1975–78). At UNC, McNamara regularly taught a seminar on rare books and special collections in the School of Information and Library Science. During his tenure at UNC, McNamara worked especially to build the Rare Book Collection's holdings of English and Irish literature of the 19th and 20th centuries, American literature of the post-World War II period, and popular culture materials of the 20th century. In the early 1990s, he was elected to three consecutive terms as member-at-large of the ACRL's Rare Books and Manuscripts Section.

Frieda Rosenberg has retired as head of serials cataloging at the University of North Carolina (UNC) after 28 years with the library. Rosenberg joined the library as a serials cataloger in 1980 and was promoted to head of the section in 1988. In addition to temporary work at the UNC Library, her previous library experience included processing and public service positions with the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore, the libraries of Ohio State and Stanford universities, and the Durham City and County Library. During her tenure at UNC, Rosenberg served as the UNC liaison to the CONSER Operations Committee and was a founding member in 1999 of the CONSER Publications Patterns and Holdings Task Force. As a consultant to the Library of Congress, she produced a day-and-a-half training course, "Serial Holdings Workshop," and she regularly conducted serials training workshops around the country. In 2003, she won the Bowker/Ulrich's Serials Librarianship Award for her many contributions to the advancement and understanding of serial holdings, particularly the MARC21 Format for Holdings Data. In 2008, she received the distinguished alumni award from the UNC School of Information and Library Science. ~
