

One Thousand 1961 Books For the Undergraduate College Library

By ROBERT C. JONES

THIS LIST of books for 1961 follows similar lists compiled for 1958 and 1959 by Robert T. Jordan, and the list I did for 1960. It does not include revised editions (except extensive revisions), annuals, or volumes within a set; paperbacks as such are not included, nor is fiction. A separate list of revisions, series, etc., would be useful, as much to get the old volumes off the shelves as to get the new ones on. The books are general in nature and no particular subject area is stressed; this is the responsibility of each college, and depends upon curriculum, faculty, student and community needs.

It is interesting to note that there were proportionately more desirable books in the area of the social sciences, a welcome change from the undue emphasis on science in the past two years. 1961 was a year for revisions and additional volumes, and, in leaving them out, it was difficult to select 1000 books which were considered desirable for the undergraduate college library; it would be regrettable if everyone agreed that all those I have selected are worth while.

Many welcome changes are forthcoming in central book processing, automation for quicker delivery from publishers and dealers, books with LC cards included, and better reviewing services. It is hoped that the 'new Shaw' project will be underway by next year and that it will provide more frequent and comprehensive listings of both basic and current books. Librarians should take advantage of every service which will
