About the Authors

Eric Sulindra W., M.Pd. is a graduate of the Graduate School, Widya Mandala Catholic University, majoring in TEFL, Teaching English as Foreign Language. He is currently a lecturer of Business English Writing, Business Correspondence, and Business English Communication for students of Widya Mandala Secretarial Academy, Surabaya, Indonesia. He is also supervising an English Debating Club and English Society of the students in Widya Mandala Secretarial Academy, Surabaya, Indonesia

Reza Rezvani did his undergraduate (English Literature) and master degrees (TEFL) at Shiraz University, Iran. He received his Ph.D. degree from the same university in 2010. He has taught Translation Studies and TEFL courses. His areas of interest include Language Assessment, Translation, Quality Assessment, Materials Development & Evaluation, Teacher Education, and Teaching Language Skills.

Safiyeh Pakdaman took her undergraduate degree (TEFL) at Islamic Azad University, Shiraz branch, Iran, and her master degree (TEFL) at the same university, Fars Science and Research branch. Her areas of interest are TEFL Studies and Teacher Education.

Rouhollah Askari Bigdeli holds an MA in TEFL from Yasouj University, Iran. Currently he is a lecturer at Yasouj University. He is the senior associate editor of the Iranian EFL Journal and has published and presented papers in the areas of teacher identity, translation teaching, critical literacy, and CALL.

Lani Freeborn has been teaching English as a foreign language for five years. She is a student at the Institute of Education University College London. Lani currently teaches English in Nanjing, China.

Aseel Kanakri is a Ph.D. candidate and a graduate assistant at the College of Education at Kent State University, Ohio. She specializes in Curriculum and Instruction and Teaching English tp Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL). She is also a Senior lecturer of English at the University of Akron and Kent State University. She has a master's degree in Rhetoric and Composition from University of Akron. Her research interests are ESL, Curriculum & Instruction and Literacy studies.

Mateus Yumarnamto is an educator from Indonesia and a Fullbright scholar at IU Bloomington. He is interested in language teaching and cultural studies, especially in the area of language teacher education. He is also interested in how teachers' professional identities are shaped and reshaped in their life history and narratives. He is an Adjunct Lecturer, East Asian Languages and Cultures, and a Ph.D. candidate at the Department of Literacy, Culture, and Language Education, School of Education.

Hadis Toufani has been studying English in different language institutes in Tehran since she was 18. Due to her interest in English language, she decided to opt for English major and got her BA in English Language and Literature in 2009 at Azad University, Karaj branch. Afterwards, she decided to change her major and study TEFL for her MA and graduated in 2014 at the University of Tehran, Kish International Campus with an MA thesis entitled "Narrative Discourse of Second Language Learners: Language and Task Effects."

Her research interests include Discourse Analysis, Contrastive Analysis and Bilingualism and their applications to Second Language Aquisition. She has taught general English for nearly a year in an English institute in Tehran

Sultan A. Almuhaimeed is an assistant professor of curriculum & instruction. He has a BA in English Language & Translation, M.Ed in Curriculum & Instruction, and a Ph.D in curriculum & instruction with emphasis on TESOL/EFL. He is a faculty member in the Dept. of Curriculum & Instruction, College of Education, Qassim University, Saudi Arabia. He teaches graduate and undergraduate levels courses related to: curriculum theories, new approaches of curriculum, research in curriculum, teaching methodology. His research interests are related to bridging the gap between theory and practice with topics related to constructivist practices when applied to the field of TESOL/EFL.