The field of AI and law is concerned with: the investigation of legal reasoning using computational methods; applications which use AI techniques to support tasks in the legal domain; and the investigation of AI techniques using law as the example domain. ICAIL-95 will provide a forum for the presentation and discussion of the latest research results and practical applications and will stimulate interdisciplinary and international collaboration in the growing AI and Law community. Previous meetings of the International Conference have taken place in Boston (1987), Vancouver (1989), Oxford (1991) and Amsterdam (1993).
