

Table of contents

Doctoral Education in Planning and Urban Studies in Italy: what is it really for? Introduction and Editorial note. Enzo Falco and Alessandro Rinaldi	pp.	1-17
The doctoral path in urban studies in Italy: between personal expectations and institutional goals. Grazia Di Giovanni and Cora Fontana	pp.	18-49
Exploring the Mobility of Italian PhD Students of Urban Studies. Marilena Prisco	pp.	50-84
The International PhD experience in urban studies in Italy. Joanne Ahern, David Gogishvili and Dicle Kizildere,	pp.	85-110
The multidisciplinary PhD course: A history and a way forward. Ruba Saleh	pp.	111-131
The hard work of preserving the value of doctoral education. The case of the PhD in Regional and Urban Planning at Sapienza, Rome Valentina Alberti	pp.	132-157